VACCINATION PROGRAMS IN THE NEWS: HEARING SET FOR ANTI-VACCINATION MD

From an article by Graeme Hamilton in the July 6 issue of THE GAZETTE, MONTREAL, [quoting:]

A renegade doctor who has waged a high-profile campaign against vaccination won her first skirmish with Quebec's College of Physicians yesterday, but the main battle is set for next month. Dr. Guylaine Lanctot, whose 1994 book The Medical Mafia topped Quebec best-seller lists for weeks, is accused by the college of breaching the physicians' code of ethics by spreading information that is "inaccurate, deceptive, out of place and contrary to current medical data". [Sure they're yelping—she's EXPOSING THEM!]

The complaint accuses Lanctot of making statements in television interviews that could have panicked people and discouraged the vaccination of children. [Perhaps she was telling the truth!] Lanctot's statements, cited by the college, include claims that vaccines destroy the immune system, are responsible for the AIDS epidemic in New York and an increase in cancer, and could lead to children being born with mouse tails and rabbit fur. The college also quotes from Lanctot's book, including claims that vaccination aids genocide by allowing people from a certain race to be targeted and that vaccination leads to violence and crime.

If found guilty of the infractions, Lanctot could be barred from practicing medicine.

GORE DEFENDS GOVT'S FREE VACCINE PROGRAM

This AP article comes from the June 26 issue of the ROSWELL DAILY RECORD, [quoting:]

The nation's poor record in child immunization makes it essential that the government continue offering free vaccines, Vice President Al Gore said Sunday, responding to a report that Republicans hope to kill the program. [In other words, since some parents apparently choose not to immunize their children, the government should do it for them?] "Isn't it troubling to see the United States way, way down the list of countries around the world in terms of vaccinating children against diseases?" Gore asked on ABC's This Week With David Brinkley. [It's a lot MORE troubling to learn what's behind this Elite-sponsored vaccine give-away program. CONTACT's January 31, 1995 issue has the story.]

SO DOES LAROUCHE

At least his newspaper, THE NEW FEDERALIST, has this to say in the July 10 issue, [quoting:]

The Vaccines for Children (VFC) program, which seeks to guarantee free vaccines to all American children, regardless of income, has come under heavy fire in the Conservative Revolution-run Congress.

The targeting of the federal immunization program for breakup is exactly what Ben Franklin meant when he spoke of “penny wise and pound foolish”.... The federal government’s constitutionally mandated responsibility is to secure the blessings of liberty to this nation—one of the greatest of those blessings being freedom from preventable disease. [Wow! That was quite a stretch: from the Constitution to government-sponsored vaccines! Even if immunizations were GOOD for you, I’d still have to believe that they belong in the private sector. Let the drug companies—or private doctors—give ‘em away, if they want. CONTACT readers have probably figured out by now that this issue has been totally misrepresented to meet the profit-mongering of the drug companies, as well as the depopulation and total-control agenda of the NWO. So it makes me wonder why LaRouche and his organization are supportive of immunizations.]

CRYPTOSPORIDIUM IS NEWS IN CANADA

I hope you read Dr. Young’s astute editorial comments about cryptosporidium and water contamination in last week’s CONTACT—these critters are real handy to have around if you’ve a mind to depopulate the planet, due to their capacity to act as a carrier for other diseases. The catchy name—crypto-sporidium—you can almost sing it—has been popping up rather innocuously in the media these last few weeks. This article hales from the July 13 issue of the VANCOUVER (Canada) SUN, [quoting:]

The people who safeguard Greater Vancouver’s water supply will decide Friday if they want to spend $165,000 to study the danger posed by a parasite in the region’s reservoirs. The Greater Vancouver water district’s water committee will vote on a study of the cryptosporidium parasite proposed by the B.C. Centres for Disease Control [When this group gets into it, it’s time to be suspicious.] and the University of B.C. When cryptosporidium was discovered in the area’s drinking water last year, medical health officers quickly [TOO quickly!] assured the public there was no need to worry.

The study now being proposed would analyze human blood samples from a cross section of the local population to trace the cryptosporidium and determine if it is prevalent enough to cause problems. [Sounds like they want to check the effectiveness of their cryptosporidium-dispersion program.]

TORONTO BLESSING BASHING

This comes from Australia, from a recent issue of THE COURIER-MAIL, [quoting:]

Theology graduate Tony Payne, 33, doesn’t look the sort to throw grenades but, as the author of the first major backlash against the so-called Toronto Blessing, in Christian circles that is exactly what he is doing. The Toronto Blessing, in which believers fall down, laugh hysterically or bark like animals while supposedly under the influence of the Holy Spirit has swept churches in the United Kingdom, the United States, Canada and Australia. [Hmmm, when I was a kid, and got in trouble for behavior like that, it never dawned on me to pass it off as a religious experience!]

The question of whether the Toronto Blessing is the work of God is causing dissension both in the Pentecostal and mainstream churches. Far from being the work of God, Payne believes the “blessing” is simply a matter of mass hypnosis brought on by the emotional atmosphere and particular dynamics of the meetings where it occurs. His book, No Laughing Matter: The Toronto Blessing and Real Christianity, is believed to be the first book published on the subject.

The Toronto Blessing started in January last year at the Airport Vineyard Church in Toronto, Canada. There was an outbreak of odd physical behavior, uncontrollable laughter being a noted feature, which convinced those present that God was giving them a special anointing in preparation for a great worldwide revival. [Good grief.] It spread, with an estimated 2000 churches participating in Britain alone.

But Payne believes the phenomena is far from new. “The falling down, the animal noises, laughing, catalepsy—all these manifestations have been seen in Pentecostal and charismatic churches for much of the century,” he said. “These phenomena can also be seen in pagan religions and secular hypnosis.” Far from being a renewal of the traditional churches, Payne believes the followers of the Toronto Blessing are “sincerely deluded”.

HOIST ON THEIR OWN PETARD?
LAWYERS HIT WITH
MALPRACTICE SUITS

From the July 11 issue of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, [quoting:]

For lawyers, the irony of being hoist with their own petard is striking. Lawyers did much to create the litigation frenzy now plaguing them, by convincing people that for every setback, someone is to blame. Now, disgruntled clients are blaming them. Frustrated by high fees, long delays and impersonal relations, they are suing over everything from soured real-estate deals to disappointing trial outcomes, post-trial judgments and appeals—and everyone from solo practitioners to corporate law firms.

Moreover, legal malpractice suits couldn't be proliferating without other lawyers pushing them. With their ranks ever-increasing, lawyers are more willing to sue their own. “You wind up with simple cannibalization,” says Joseph W. Acton, publisher of Lawyers' Liability Review, a monthly newsletter on legal-malpractice law. “Lawyers are eating lawyers to maintain their own standard of living.” [How fitting!! But of course, the one who ends up paying for all this suing is the client!]

THE PIPELINE by Michael Maholy

PART XVIII: SIGNED, SEALED, AND DELIVERED

Editor's note: The last time we presented Michael Maholy's "inside" story about The (C.I.A.) Pipeline was in our 4/25/95 CONTACT on p. 38, where he called that installment: "Setting The Hook". We now join Michael after a 3-month interlude wherein he has been transferred to a new facility, a minimum-security prison, and is now able to again continue with his Pipeline series.

When we last left off, I was on Norman's Cay, a tiny island in the upper chain of the Bahamas. I was a personal guest of two of the most notorious Colombian drug lords who ever hit the shores of the United States of America: Max Mermelstein, and Rafa Salazar. Along with two other drug pilots, Mickey Monday and Jimmy Cooley, I had embarked upon what started out as a deep-sea fishing trip, but what actually turned out to be another trip into the dark world of drugs, weapons, money and lust—a world in which few have participated.

As it was, we all ended up staying at Carlos Ledher's private island compound, where several hundred tons of cocaine and marijuana would leave for secluded airstrips throughout the U.S. mainland. After a day of diving in the island's lagoon, observing many of the island's underwater residents, I felt that the experience of viewing the many different sizes of the warm water hammerhead shark had climaxed the day. That was purely a false assumption on my part, as the night to follow would bring yet more people to meet, more drugs to ingest, more lust and personal greed.

Although my own ventures into the world of smuggling were increasingly profitable, it still had not been lucrative enough to satisfy someone as ambitious and enterprising as I once thought I was. I was well aware that many of the people I was supplying with drugs and weapons—often men far less talented in the nature of the game—were still making huge profits, more than I was for the efforts put into the business. This is when I first really realized that if I were to become as successful as the people for whom I was working, I would have to begin to think very seriously about getting more involved in the cocaine trade.

To get started, I thought I would have to get in a little closer with the Colombian, Carlos Ledher. But this man was very unpredictable and would go ballistic at a whim. It was that night at a party thrown by the island's host, Carlos, that I would meet a man named Anthony "Butch" Zukas. Zukas was an ex-Navy fighter pilot who was considered a flying ace of great expertise. He had flown down to Norman's Cay in his personal Cessna 210 that had state-of-the-art navigation beacon instruments installed, along with radio scramblers and extra fuel tanks. Max would first introduce me to Zukas, telling me that he and Carlos were very close and that Zukas had made millions in the smuggling trade. Max added that it was a good thing that Barry Seal had left the island earlier, as Seal and Zukas were rivals in the flying game. One was always trying to outdo the other. Carlos was already somewhat mad at Barry Seal for planning the cargo weight of the cocaine that turned out to be too heavy for the DC-10 that had crashed into the ocean earlier that morning. Zukas would, in turn, play on this, gaining more of Carlos's favor.

After exchanging pleasantries and discussing various mutual concerns, Zukas informed me that he planned on retiring after his next trip to Colombia. Everyone was always planning on that next trip, the big one, the last trip that would make them the mother lode. Well, needless to say, it would not be Zukas's last trip, nor mine, nor any of the others. Lust and greed know no bounds; there is no end, unless, of course, you're dead, or end up typing this, your story, from a federal prison!

Another dignified guest of the island that night was a representative of Colombia's Ochoa family, one Bobby Correa. In Colombia, the Ochoa family is as well known and, in some circles, as highly respected, as the Rockefellers in this country. It was the most powerful of the families who made up the Medellin Cartel which, at the time, was said to control 80 percent of the cocaine that entered the U.S. Little did they know that George Bush and his family were also very well connected into the cocaine trade. They probably knew more than I thought they did, as I thought I knew all there was to know at the time. Wrong again!

Named after the city of Medellin where it is based, the Cartel was made up at the time of four loosely allied families, each with its own tightly controlled organization. According to my boss, George Bush and his drug officials, the Medellin Cartel took in almost $8 billion a year from sales of cocaine and marijuana. I always wondered what amount the Bush family and friends netted. With huge amounts like this being made for the Cartels, cocaine would be the leading export from Colombia, leaving coffee second. With money being made like that, the families would qualify to be featured in Fortune magazine. The Cartels would rank right up there with companies like Proctor and Gamble, Colgate, R.J. Reynolds and other giants. Part of this, I thought, could all be mine, as well. Boy, how some cocaine could make a young man from Chicago's head swell, planting ideas of getting rich quick!

In the early 80s the heads of the four Cartel families were Jorge Ochoa, Carlos Lehder, Pablo Escobar, and Gonzalo Rodriguez. These four billionaires amassed such great wealth from cocaine that they thought that they ruled the world. While Bogota is the political capital of Colombia, Medellin is its bustling commercial and industrial center, with a population just over 2 million. It is also the world headquarters of the cocaine industry. Although the city has a police force of about 1400 men, the Cartel would rely on its own small army to enforce its own laws. As a result, the city has been overwhelmed by violence, as heavily armed Cartel henchmen roam the streets with impunity. This also meant that the area was wide open; a good retail market for weapons existed. George Bush knew this, as well.

The raw material for the Cartel's cocaine comes mostly from Bolivia and Peru. Millions of peasant farmers there cultivate coca plants on small jungle plots, earning far more than they would earn from raising other crops. In Bolivia, for example, revenues from coca total $500 to $700 million per year—the only bright spot in an otherwise severely depressed economy. After harvesting, the coca leaves are taken to primitive laboratories where they are mashed and cooked into a thick coca paste, or “pasta basica”. The Cartel imports the paste and converts it into pure cocaine in its large sophisticated labs that are scattered throughout the thick jungles of Colombia. The finished product, in powdered form, is exported by various means to the major cities of the U.S., where up to eight million Americans regularly sniff, inject, and otherwise consume it.

The people I was fishing with, as well as those whom I met later that night, were the people directly responsible for all of this. The U.S. distribution was being handled by these people who ran the Cartel's tight wholesale network. I was falling deeper and deeper into the web of self-destruction. Max Mermelstein, from New York, later told me of the riches being made just from the New York City Area. In the New York Metropolitan Area alone, the Cartel's distribution headquarters is located in the Borough of Queens. In addition to its strategic proximity to Manhattan and the suburbs of Long Island, Queens alone has 50,000 to 70,000 illegal Colombian residents.

In Jackson Heights, Douglaston, Corona, and other Queens neighborhoods, several competing distribution rings would operate "stash houses", where bulk shipments of cocaine and marijuana are received and stored. These typical suburban houses are rented by Colombian couples with false identification papers, who look and act like your everyday, normal Long Islanders. They blend right in and fit the part well. These people are average folks who are usually excellent customers of the local banks, where they frequently make large cash deposits.

The cocaine arrives at the stash houses in relatively pure form. As it passes through different levels of distribution, it is diluted or "cut" several times with various additives. At each step the middleman marks up the price. By the time the cocaine reaches the customer, the consumer, the price has risen to $2,000 per ounce for the big spenders on Wall Street or out in the Hamptons and $100 a gram for the small dealer, raising the price of an ounce to $2800.

At the upper levels of distribution, many of the major dealers are alone and unarmed when they make deliveries and receive cash payments, often in shopping bags. This isn't as foolhardy as it might seem. They don't really expect to be held up as anyone who would ever bother these major dealer by ripping them off, or messing with them in any way, knows that the Cartel's shooters would not be far behind.

In Colombia, the patriarch of the Ochoa family is Fabio Ochoa Restrepo, who is now dead. A fat former restaurant owner, he started smuggling television sets and Scotch before getting started into cocaine. Before he died, Don Fabio devoted much of his time to breeding Antiguan walking horses and collecting original Picassos and other Spanish artifacts. (Note: Don Tyson, of Tyson Poultry out of Springdale, Arkansas, also had dealings with his good friend Don Fabio and purchased many a horse, along with major loads of cocaine from Colombia. Tyson, being the good friend of one William Jefferson Clinton, paid for much of Clinton's campaigns with drug money!)

When Don Fabio decided to retire from the drug trade in the early 80s, he appointed his son Jorge Luis to take control of the family's empire, assisted by his younger brother, Fabio Jr. Jorge was now living in Miami and running an importing firm that handled 500 kilos of cocaine per week. At six feet and 225 pounds, Jorge Ochoa looked very plump, prosperous, and very much dressed like the businessman that he was. Unlike the flamboyant playboy, the host of the island, Carlos Lehder, Jorge had a reputation like Max, that of a devoted family man. I can personally say that I have never seen Jorge use cocaine and I have only seen him take an occasional drink. Until a few years prior to retiring, Jorge ran the family business from an office in downtown Medellin, but he preferred to spend all of his quality time at his Las Lomas ranch. This sprawling ranch south of the city was also home to many exotic animals about which I have spoken earlier.

South of Barranquilla the Ochoas owned a cattle ranch, to which, by the way, several hundred head of cattle were traded for cocaine by George Bush—gifts from Zapata Cattle Company. The ranch, which is called Hacienda Veracruz, encompasses several smaller towns within its boundaries. I know because I once flew there with Barry Seal. Upon our arrival at the ranch's remote landing strip, we saw a still-smoldering wreck of a Piper Aztec at the end of the runway. When Barry asked what had happened, one of the ground crew said that the pilot had been unable to start the plane's engine because of a dead battery, so the plane had to be dragged off the runway so that we could land, and then it had burst into flames. While a group of men with machine guns surrounded the runway, another group of loaders loaded our plane with duffel bags of cocaine. Barry took on two hundred kilos, while I, the new boy, sat and planned out our route, fuel and logistics for the long trip back to Louisiana. On the return trip, we dropped the load into the swamp down near Henderson, LA, without a hitch! I remembered looking at the bottom of Seal's plane after we had landed in Baton Rouge, how it was packed with cow shit from Colombia. We both laughed.

These were just a few of the big people I had met on Norman's Cay. The night was still full of much activity. The drugs and booze were flowing. My mind was thinking about all the new people I had met. I was breaking my personal rule, which was not to get tied up with the Colombians any more than I had to. After all, my close friend Barry Seal had left, and I felt that if anyone would be able to help me out of any jams, it would be Seal. Max was a friend, but he was deeply obligated to the Cartel.

Much of the evening's conversations were devoted to the matter of how to cover the money trail—huge profits from illegal drugs. What is not understood by much of the public about drug dealing is the fact that while drug dealers keep very accurate reports of the cash intake, they never report any of this to the federal officials. Federal drug officials estimate that billions of illegally made dollars go undetected. This, in turn, means that the drug dealers must find a way to launder their money. We are now seeing (through what little reliable news we are able to get from media sources) just how the Clintons got caught up in their own money-laundering activities.

Back when I was caught up into all of the drugs and weapons in a big-time manner, most legitimate businessmen would dream about rolling in piles of cash, but they could never begin to appreciate the problems that go along with trying to cover a money trail. As I have stated before, there were times when I had so much money just lying around, it was hard to spend! Few Americans who read about daily drug busts in the newspapers have any idea of just how big the drug industry really is and how the illegal narcotics business corrupts our own elected government officials at the highest levels in Washington.

One of the many problems with the laundering of illegal money is that a person cannot simply walk into a bank, regardless of its size, location, whatever, and deposit their earnings without creating problems. Since their cash sales are illegal, they must first cleanse the drug-tainted money to give it legitimacy, a process commonly known as "money laundering". For a drug dealer of substantial size, laundering their money is more difficult than distributing the drug itself. Under current U.S. law, any bank or other financial institution handling a cash transaction of $10,000 or more is required to fill out a Currency Transaction Report. The CTR must include the customer's name, address, Social Security number, occupation, and the source and destination of the funds. All CTRs are sent to a central IRS office where they are recorded in a computerized data bank available to federal investigators (except when the Clintons and their chosen friends are involved).

Those who try to avoid such records face a similar obstacle if they try to take their money out of the country. Anyone leaving the country with more than $10,000 or more in cash, travelers checks, or bank checks must file a Currency and Monetary Instrument Report with the Customs Service at the point of departure. Back before 1984, the limit was only $5000, but was then raised because so many businessmen and high rollers now carry that much cash on their trips abroad that the paperwork became too burdensome.

It is perfectly legal to deposit more than $10,000 in cash or take such amounts out of the country. What is illegal is to do so without filing the proper federal currency forms. Since those forms tend to attract attention and invite curiosity as to the source of the funds, drug traffickers and those engaged in other illegal enterprises are naturally reluctant to file them.

Until the early 80s, these currency laws were rarely enforced with much rigor, particularly in places like Miami and Arkansas. In the Miami area, as well as most of the southern part of Florida, bankers became accustomed to having people walk into their banks with bags full of money. Even though the bankers knew in the back of their minds that this money was from illegal drug deals, they still would accept it, only to broaden their own bank accounts. You will see as time progresses, that Arkansas has received a lot of the overflow money that first was entering Florida, but as the southern politicians became aware of the huge amounts of money that could be made from the drug business, people like Dan Lasater, Webster Hubbell, Jackson Stevens, Don Tyson, and our dear pals Bill and Hillary Clinton would see to it that they had a slice of the pie. True, we are going back some years to the 80s, but the trail began somewhere.

Since the feds began cracking down on the banks in Florida, people like the above-mentioned, including myself, Barry Seal, and many, many others, began to deposit their money in several different banks, in several different states, including Texas, Arkansas, Kentucky and Illinois.

A lot of drug dealers tend to spend their money on luxury cars, yachts, and other ostentatious toys, not only because these are the customary rewards of success in their trade, but also because they have few other ways to spend their money. Although the major drug dealers and their families (the Clintons included) are fond of Southern Florida and locations throughout the more central and northern states, the new currency laws have made banking more difficult and increasingly troublesome, so what they would do is to take their money on private planes into places like Panama and the Cayman Islands, where political officials could be bought off. Recent rumor has it that the daughter of Bill and Hillary Clinton has a bank account of over $25 million tucked away in several banks through the Central America region.

Much of the drug money ends up in accounts at these banks and brokerage houses; a good deal of it is converted into cashier's checks, traveler's checks, bearer bonds, and other easily negotiable forms. Some people I personally know have even converted their profits into airline tickets. Much of it is filtered into legitimate retail businesses that customarily deal in cash: pizza parlors, video-rental stores, fast food restaurants (and let's not forget the Clintons' cattle futures!).

Because of the sheer bulk of the cash they must handle, most drug dealers try to convert the many small bills they receive from their customers into more convenient denomination, with hundreds being the favorite. For some reason, the hundred-dollar bill is the accepted bill that major drug dealers love for transactions.

The night's talk at Carlos' home was all about how to make more money from the money already made. By the time the night was over, the small island had attracted many of the wealthiest drug dealers of the time, and there I was, smack dab in the middle of all of this, waiting to make my pot of gold. The cocaine was wall to wall, as was the booze and the marijuana. Women were there for the asking. Carlos—well, he had his little house boy, of whom he appeared quite fond. I spent the remainder of the evening chatting with Ed Ward and Mickey Monday. Time was running out for me. I had played during much of the winter holiday season, going up to angel Fire, then on this fishing expedition. I had forgotten about time itself, as I was having fun—lots of it. And plus, it seemed that every time I turned around, I was making money—lots of it!

The morning came too fast, as the past mornings seemed often to have come. People in the islands do most of their business in the evening hours, sleeping well into the day—but not today, as Max still had to produce that big tuna for me as promised. I had provided them a lot of knowledge that they needed to successfully transport their drugs. The boat was fueled and supplied with everything we would need to make the day's fishing trip and crossing back to Miami. Fishing is just like a lot of ventures—one takes a big chance. There are no guarantees. As it turned out, I caught several more tuna, but the big one is still out there somewhere.

Upon arriving back in Miami, I had a lot of recovering to do. I did not feel like flying back to Little Rock that day, so I told Max that I would stay over another day. He had no problem with this, and so he planned a family-style cookout at his home for the evening. We spent that night in the presence of his wife and children, not talking about drugs or money, but rather what he was planning to do with his family later that week.

In the next chapter, I will take you back to Arkansas, to Mena, and then down to oversee the unloading of the weapons that were sent to South America on George Bush's ZAPATA 7. Thanks again for following the story of the C.I.A. Pipeline.

CHAPTER 3

RECENT MESSAGES FROM CATHY O'BRIEN AND DAUGHTER KELLY

To CONTACT

7/29/95

Dear Rick,

It has been awhile since I have been in contact with you directly although you are often on my mind and in my heart. I trust you are well and at peace with yourself in spite of the tumultuous whirl of the world.

Life has certainly been precarious around here lately, as I am sure you are aware. Thank God for Mark's comforting, all encompassing love. Despite the pressure, the future is looking bright with promise.

I assure Kelly of that TRUTH always. Seeing and experiencing a brighter side of life through her newly gained CONTACTs has given her an inner strength as only love can do. As you can see by the enclosed letter, Kelly has broken program to write!! I am elated!! Plus, Mark and I reap the benefit of this accomplishment through the letters she is writing us! For the first time in years, we have written communication! I know you understand how deeply Mark and I appreciate this giant step forward.

In view of progress, Kelly's dire and desperate situation has reached unbearable proportions for her. She, too, is experiencing the negatives that accompany success in an effort of this magnitude from all sides...including inside. Our time together continues to be illegally and immorally limited by the state of Tennessee to the point I am placed out of reach when she needs me the most. Our monthly visit time together last week was reduced to 1 1/2 hours, but we maximized every second. I held her, comforted her, assured her she is loved, and listened to her eloquently express her need from the depths of her soul. Her need is enormous, Rick. And it is urgent. She knows I am here for her, but is frustrated when we are so cruelly separated at those times when she needs an understanding ear and extra assurances.

Her CONTACTs have helped enormously in filling that void. Please encourage readers to continue writing and supporting her now. If possible, please print her letter which I am sure you will have to edit. Notice her closing and how she identifies with herself! Once again she is just like her mother in feeling at home with the name Phillips. She does not identify with "Cox" any more than I do "O'Brien", but we have agreed to drag the names through the muck until she is freed from her past. The state of Tennessee requires me (and anyone else who writes) to address her as "Cox", so I comply but make my own claims to her by putting "O'Brien" in parenthesis. The fact that she signed this letter as Phillips indicates the depth of her soul from which she is writing. Her appreciation is genuine and runs deep enough to have broken program. But please put a note at the end of her letter that, if anyone writes her as Kelly Phillips, she with NOT receive it. It must be addressed to Kelly Cox.

This letter represents an enormous victory for Kelly...an enormous victory for us all.

Thank you for making this possible.

In Light of Truth and Love,

/s/ Cathy O'Brien

P.S. I am honored by your review of TRANCE Formation of America in last week's CONTACT. Thank you, Rick.

To CONTACT

July 1995

I cannot express how happy I am for receiving mail from as kind of people as you all. It is a wonderful thing to know that people actually care and have hearts for other humans besides themselves. Those whom I speak of are not truly human. I could not write you all back individually due to about THREE boxes full of letters to return!

The gifts inclosed in the package were very thoughtful. I loved them! For any inquiring minds, I pretty much live for animals. Well, them, my mom, and my dad whom I can't see (which really sucks. Pardon my French.). This is by far the lamest letter/note I have ever written, so I apologize. I guess it's just because it's kind've hard to write to a whole bunch of people I don't know and all together at the same time. Oh, the money order I received helped me for pens, paper and envelopes. The money REALLY helped me. I got hygiene items I have needed for a long while. I got a perfect heart necklace from two wonderful people in Canada. I wear it all the time. Yes, I am getting my mail now, UNopened, so keep sending, please! Expect more letters from me in CONTACT.

Well, I've got to go for now!

MUCH LOVE!!!!

THE NEWS DESK

by Phyllis Linn 7/31/95

MICROCHIP IN YOUR BRAIN

Here's confirmation and an interesting spin on the "chip of the beast" scenario from the July-August issue of Australia's NEW DAWN, [quoting:]

The magazine Computer Age of 6 June reports on the possibility of linking a computer microchip to the human brain. A study by one of Britain's leading "futurologists" says the human brain could be connected directly to computers within the next 50 years [Isn't it fun to be a "futurologist", mystically reporting on technology that's been around for years—but kept secret from us common folk!]

Professor Peter Cocrane, head of British Telecom's high-tech laboratories at Suffolk [guys to keep an eye on], predicts that by 2020 scientists will start to develop ways to link powerful silicon chips directly to the brain, possibly by growing nerve cells on the chip. It is claimed such a link would allow someone to carry the entire Encyclopedia Britannica around in their head on a silicon chip. "The link would create a physical connection between the carbon-based memory of the human brain to the silicon memory of the computer chip."

The "Big Brother" angle on this story is that implantable microchips could be programmed to control and regulate human beings. Microchips that connect and integrate with the brain is one step away from microchips under the skin. At this very time, a number of microchip under-the-skin programs for pets operate around the world, and some people believe the technology might already be in use on humans [What do YOU think?]

HILLARY WRITES

SIN-DICATED COLUMN

From the July 3-9 issue of THE WASHINGTON TIMES, NATIONAL WEEKLY EDITION, [quoting:]

Move over, Ann Landers. Here comes a new adviser on family affairs: first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. For the first time since first lady Eleanor Roosevelt [Hillary's soul mate] wrote "My Day" six days a week, Mrs. Clinton will begin authoring her own weekly newspaper column beginning July 23, the White House announced.... The column will be of a "personal and observational nature, reflecting on events and people she has met," Miss Caputo [Hillary's spokeswoman] said. [In other words, Hillary's contribution to the re-election campaign.]

DEADLY MEDICINE:

A BOOK REVIEW

The next article comes from the June issue of the FDA RAID REPORT The Insider's Guide to Illegal and Unconstitutional Acts By The FDA (published by the Life Extension Foundation, 800-841-5433), [quoting:]

“It is clear that hundreds of thousands died prematurely...often the effect was so sudden and unexpected that people literally dropped dead while going about their normal lives.... The result of this single medical misjudgment about the properties of these drugs produced a death toll larger than the United States’ combat losses in Korea and Vietnam. If one were to total the deaths from every commercial airplane crash in the history of aviation, the sum would not approach the number of deaths from this episode.”

The above excerpts are from a new book entitled Deadly Medicine by Thomas J. Moore (Simon & Schuster, 1995), which tells the story of how FDA-approved antiarrhythmic drugs have been killing vast numbers of Americans by causing the cardiac arrests they are supposed to prevent. Moore tells how the FDA approved Class I antiarrhythmic drugs such as Tambacor, Enkaid, and Ethmozine—even though they had full knowledge that these drugs had already killed innocent Americans and would kill many more in the future. The FDA’s decision to approve these killers was based upon the unproven theory that the drugs would save the lives of more people than they would kill. The FDA accepted this theory without a scintilla of evidence that any of the drugs had ever saved even a single life! [Yet they remove natural herbs and vitamins from the shelves of health food stores in terroristic, gestapo-like raids!]

Moore’s book exposes the FDA as a corrupt and immoral agency that routinely conspires with the pharmaceutical giants to kill innocent Americans, without the slightest concern for their victims! [The book report goes on for 5 pages. Provocative stuff! Call their 800-number for a copy.]

MORE “RIGHT-WING” BASHING

This exercise in discernment is from an article by Tom Bethell of the AMERICAN SPECTATOR, reprinted in the June 21 issue of THE MODESTO BEE, [quoting:]

A Conference of the States (COS), made up of governors and legislators, had been scheduled for October in hope of promoting a shift of power away from Washington. It was postponed [not cancelled??] recently in response to pressure from gun activists and militia members who felt it was a disguised attempt to abrogate the Constitution. This shows how powerful these groups have become, at least at the state level. [It does show how much influence we can have when we focus and act, but this also shows that, as soon as our focus shifts, they are back to their same dirty tricks.] It also shows how out of touch with reality some of these right-wing groups are. [And how naive or deceptive this correspondent is!] The conference hoped to strengthen the 10th Amendment, which reserves to the states all powers not explicitly delegated to the federal government. A revived 10th Amendment is exactly what those who blocked the conference also want; they have succeeded only in undermining their own agenda. [This correspondent apparently ASSUMES that the STATED goal is the REAL goal; aware students of history know this is rarely the case.]

One problem: The conference coincided with United Nations Day, and that hinted at a nefarious, unacknowledged agenda. [Another clue: look at the sponsors and check their past records and allegiance.] I HATE to use the word “paranoid”. [I find THAT hard to believe, since it is used in nearly all articles that bash those who effort to salvage the Constitution and expose those who undermine it.]

The more extreme right-wing fears are utterly absurd and, as we have seen, potentially self-destructive [We haven't seen anything yet, have we? Has this man actually demonstrated even a little that the COS was NOT an attempt to abrogate the Constitution?] Consider the imagined U.N. plot to take over the United States [He's not very well-read, is he? This has been very well documented over the past 50 years.] In reality, the United Nations is a waning institution and in the years ahead will probably have to struggle to survive. [Uh-oh, he reads the newspapers! Oh well, I'll spare you the rest. THE SPOTLIGHT ran an article about the COS in its February 27, 1995 issue, if you'd like another perspective.]

INTERVIEW WITH IRWIN SCHIFF

This is excerpted from a lengthy article by David Cay Johnston that appeared in the July 5 issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES, [quoting:]

LAS VEGAS, Nev.—Individual income taxes, Irwin A. Schiff tells everyone who will listen, are voluntary, but almost everyone pays because politicians have enacted complicated laws to trick people into thinking they must pay. The works of Mr. Schiff are now widely cited in the literature of tax protesters and right-wing organizations challenging the legitimacy of the Federal Government. Over the years, he has been a frequent guest on talk shows around the country, having discussed the issue with Larry King, Tom Snyder and, in the New York area, Bob Grant. He says he has sold 30,000 copies of his latest self-published book, The Federal Mafia, and more than 67,000 copies of his 1982 book, How Anyone Can Stop Paying Income Taxes. And, in recent weeks, an Internet site devoted to taxes has been dominated by arguments over Mr. Schiff's idea, now advanced by a variety of his followers, that no law makes individuals or corporations liable to pay income taxes. Mr. Schiff preaches that “a compulsory income tax would violate” the Constitution despite the 16th Amendment, and so the Internal Revenue code “was written to make paying income taxes appear mandatory”.

Irwin A. Schiff

Irwin A. Schiff, at his home in Las Vegas, Nevada, has argued for years that paying Federal income taxes is voluntary. His works are now cited in the literature of tax protesters and right-wing groups challenging the Federal government.

“The government succeeded in doing this,” he contends, “by tricking the public into believing that those enforcement provisions of the code that apply to other, nonvoluntary taxes—like alcohol and tobacco taxes—also apply to income taxes when in fact they do not.”

Mr. Schiff's grass-roots challenge to the legitimacy of the Internal Revenue Service is so far mostly words. He has won no big legal battles in his crusade and has spent more than three years in prison after losing a couple.... He carries a cellular phone but says he has no bank account, using cash or credit cards to pay his bills, because he figures the I.R.S. would seize the money as payment toward the $1.2 million in back taxes that it contends he still owes. Already, the agency has confiscated $220,000 in royalties from his 1982 book, How Anyone Can Stop Paying Income Taxes. [How ironic!! Being right doesn't always make you rich, or did we learn that already? Now is a good time to mention the benefits of Nevada Corporations—used lawfully for sheltering assets, managing a business, and avoiding unnecessary

hassles such as these.]

IRS A PAWN IN HEGELIAN GAMBIT

From the July 19 issue of the DAILY NEWS, [quoting:]

WASHINGTON—Claimed you were married on that tax return you filed in April, did you? Well, the IRS may come by your house demanding to see your marriage license. And those two children you listed as deductions? Better have birth certificates to prove when they were born and report cards to show they go to a school close enough to live with you. Otherwise, kiss those deductions good-bye.

This is the kind of rigorous grilling that several hundred thousand unlucky taxpayers can expect starting this fall. They will be selected, not because they are suspected of cheating, but because the IRS wants to know how accurately individual taxpayers fill out their forms.

The plan advocated by senior officials at the agency and approved by IRS Commissioner Margaret Milner Richardson, came under scrutiny Tuesday at congressional hearings. The committee hearings took place as the income tax system has come under intense attack from Republicans [Bastions of conservative thought, right? Guardians of our liberties, right? Wrong times two.], who hope to turn popular resentment against the tax code's complexities into increased majorities on Capitol Hill next year and to help the party capture control of the White House. [In other words, we're being set up once again!]

KHAZARIAN PROPAGANDA

This tidbit of daily brain washing is from a recent issue of the MODESTO BEE. We are being trained to equate the "Jews" with this Godly, spiritual, loving, holy, etc. ad nauseam prototype—and not to notice the Khazars in sheep's clothing—those who live by the Talmud and the Protocols. If you think the Talmud is a "holy book", better get your hands on a copy of that "holy" book and take a shocking look for yourself. Opposites rule the Khazarian methods of deception.

On the same page of the NYT is an article featuring Richie Havens, who says that although paying Federal taxes is voluntary, he DOES pay taxes, because, "I am much more effective in my own life...to be free of the legal hassles that those guys can give you." [He has a point there!]

PUBLIC LANDS AT ISSUE NYE COUNTY, NEVADA ON CUTTING EDGE OF STATES' RIGHTS STATE VS. FEDERAL LAND OWNERSHIP

by Rick Martin 8/4/95

Nye County Commissioner Dick Carver looks as conservative as any cowboy coming in off the Texas range. You can know him by the White Hat he wears. Taking a position which has far reaching implications, according to Carver, Nevada's public lands are the state's property—not the Federal government's. This has led to a watershed legal battle which has yet to completely play itself out.

Nye County Commissioner Dick Carver, a leader in the movement to gain local control over federal lands, stands in the lobby of the federal courthouse in Las Vegas.

On Friday, July 28, Nye County and the Feds went head-to-head before U.S. District Judge Lloyd George in Las Vegas.

The basic documentation in support of Carver's position consists primarily of two items—a December 7, 1993, resolution by Nye County, Nev., Board of Commissioners (Resolution 93-48) which states, in part, "recognizing that the State of Nevada owns all public lands within the borders of the State of Nevada and the Counties of Nevada have a duty to manage these lands, to protect all private rights held on these lands, and to preserve local customs, culture, economy and environment"; and a Nov. 5, 1993, letter to various government officials adopting the doctrine of public land ownership. These documents include foundational citations and legal authorities which form the lawful basis for the claim of state ownership. These cited authorities are footnoted at the conclusion of this article.

In a deliberate and informed political strategy, on July 4, 1994, Dick Carver climbed onto an aging, county-owned bulldozer and began to clear a blocked county road. When Carver started to open the road, U.S. Forest Service personnel attempted to stop him. They did not succeed.

What resulted is a legal square-off.

Pledging that "we in Washington are listening," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole saluted the Individual Rights Foundation and its fight to bring back to state control federally-occupied lands in New Mexico and the West, saying "taking back freedom for the West will increase the freedom of Americans everywhere," during the January 1995 Albuquerque conference entitled, We the People: Public Lands/States' Rights.

"When half the land of a state is owned by the federal government, it's time to rethink how our federal lands are managed," said Dole in his written statement. "I agree with you that it is time to consider new approaches to give government back to the people."

Charging the Federal government with instituting “apartheid in the West”, attorneys in Nye County, Nev., John Wayne Howard and Roger Marzulla announced on June 27, a challenge to the United States Government over the title and sovereignty of more than ten million acres of public lands located within the county.

In a brief filed in Federal District Court in Las Vegas, the Board of Commissioners of Nye County answered a U.S. Justice Department lawsuit, filed on March 8, that declares that Nye County has no legitimate claim to the lands, and cannot interfere with the activities of federal officials on such lands. Trial was set for July 28, in Las Vegas.

“Under the federal government’s view, there are two separate and unequal classes of land in the West,” said John Wayne Howard, President of the Individual Rights Foundation, who is representing Nye County. “A tiny area where individual rights and local control is protected, and a much larger area under federal control and domination. That is the very definition of apartheid.”

“The people of Nevada are fighting for the right of self-determination,” said Washington, D.C. attorney Roger J. Marzulla, of Skin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer and Feld, who also represents Nye County. Mr. Marzulla is the former head of the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Justice Department under President Reagan. “If they lose, they will be stripped of their rights as citizens of an independent, sovereign state. They will be nothing more than the subjects of a bureaucracy run from Washington, D.C.”

Howard added that the federal suit has subverted the meaning of the U.S. Constitution. “This case is about individual liberty and freedom,” said Howard. “By attempting to control and occupy over half of the West, the United States is violating the 10th Amendment and the fundamental principle of states’ rights.”

The Justice Department’s lawsuit claims that Nye County, by repairing roads closed by the federal government on public lands, violated federal law. Currently, over half of the land in the Western U.S. is under federal control and ownership, including 87 percent of Nevada and 93 percent of Nye County.

Terming it a “Revolution for Western Independence”, Individual Rights Foundation Attorney John Howard announced the start of the closely watched trial of the Nye County, Nevada Board of Commissioners, who are being sued by the U.S. Justice Department over control of public lands.

“The states of the West are being punitively singled out by Washington,” said Howard, adding that while the federal government owns only one-fifth of the entire U.S., it owns over half of the land in the 13 states of the West. “If we win, it will mean the end of separate and unequal treatment of the Western United States.”

“We will take this fight to the Supreme Court if necessary,” said Howard, who added that officials in the Justice Department are watching the case very closely. “Attorney General Reno knows that if this domino falls, so too does Washington’s stranglehold on the ownership of public lands throughout the U.S.”

In an article appearing in the July 28 edition of the Las Vegas Sun, John Howard said, “Public land in the state of Nevada was transferred automatically on statehood under the equal footing doctrine.” That puts millions of acres of land here and in the rest of the West at stake.

Peter Coppelman, deputy assistant attorney general for environmental and natural resources in the U.S. Justice Department, disagrees.

“These legal theories, in our view, are bogus. Just completely bogus,” he said. “The federal government, with 150 years of Supreme Court cases, clearly has the right to own and manage the public lands.”

In the hearing on Friday, July 28, U.S. District Judge Lloyd George said he would issue a decision on this case within a week.

In an interview with CONTACT on 8/2/95, Dick Carver explains [quoting:]

What this boils down to, we’re trying to bring the power of government in America back to the people. We’ve got to remember that the “created” can’t have more power than the “creator” and the “people” is what created government to protect them primarily for defense, commerce, communication, creation of states. What we’ve got today is, to sum it down, you’re not governed by elected officials any more in America—you’re governed by bureaucrats who work for the federal government who think they are above the law and above God and can do whatever they want. And they do get away with it. You can’t blame anybody but the people for allowing it to happen.

I think what I’d like to kind of hinge-on and thank, is—I’d like to thank the present Administration. I don’t care if it’s Clinton, Bruce Babbitt or Jack Ward Thomas or whoever it is—they have backed the American public into a corner and everybody is ready to band together now and support local control. We want to control our own destiny at the local area. And you can’t have anybody who can do a better job in governing their destiny than the people at the local area. That’s kind of summing it all up.

What we did is, we took an issue here in Nye County, rather than challenging the Endangered Species Act or the National Environmental Protection Act or The Forest Reserve or whatever you want to talk about—instead of challenging them in court we said, let’s take something inside the Constitution and focus on that to get to what we are really talking about, which is Constitutional jurisdiction by these bureaucrats. And we decided the best way here in Nye County to do it would be to legislate and to put the federal bureaucrats in a position that they challenged us in court, rather than us challenging them, because then the burden of proof will rest on the federal government.

So, it was a very carefully planned-out strategy—we’ve got a unanimous decision of all of the County Commissioners on the Board. The main thing that we are very concerned about is that nobody gets hurt; that it is always done in a peaceful manner.

We took a very aggressive step on July 4, 1994 when we went out and opened up a road that mother nature closed-off, that the Forest Service would not allow to be reopened. And we reopened that after the Forest Service screwed-up.

The area I’d like to talk about right there is: What happened is, the Forest Service had a mining company do some reclamation work up there and the mining company wanted to reopen this road and the Forest Service said no, we want it left closed so, in two or three years people would forget about it and we'll have the area locked-up. Well, what in the hell does the Forest Service want to lock-up our public lands for, so the public can't get on them?

So, we called the Forest Service in and we told them that we wanted that road opened up and they said, "We don't have the money or the time." The County said that they would open it up.

And the Forest Service said, "You'll have to get a permit."

And we said, "Do whatever it takes but we're going to open the road up."

But the Forest Service drug their feet for about six months. In that six month period is when we finally opened our eyes to the fact that the Forest Service doesn't have any jurisdiction out here; they don't own the land and this would be a good place to challenge them. So, we went ahead and opened the road without the Forest Service's approval and, long story short, about 18 months later or so, Janet Reno's office was forced into filing a lawsuit against the County over the opening of the Jefferson Canyon Rd. In that complaint, the federal government said that "the United States has no remedy at law in stopping Nye County in any future action." I thought that was kind of a give-away on the federal government's part, but they keep arguing that the property clause and the supremacy clause of the Constitution gives them the right to own and manage public lands. Our research has shown that they only hold this land in trust to be disposed of after a state is admitted into the union.

And so, we've brought on some very good attorneys and their argument was that the County Commissioners in Nye County don't have the sovereign ability to govern land-use decisions on their land in their county like the Commissioners do, for instance, in Virginia where those Commissioners have sovereign ability to govern 100% of their land within their borders. In Nye county, we only have the right to govern 7%.

So, the basic thing that the attorneys on the Nye County side asked the Judge, "Did title vest in the State of Nevada on the unappropriated public lands, when the state was admitted into the union, on an equal footing with the original states on all respects whatsoever in 1864." It's going to be hard for a judge to come out and say no, that didn't happen—because it flies right in the face of the Constitution.

And, you've got to realize that as an elected official, we took the oath of office, in the name of God, to support, protect and defend that Constitution and if we don't do that, who do we listen to? Is it our faith in God or do we have to listen to the judge and just forget the Constitution? [End quoting.]

When asked about U.S. District Judge Lloyd George, Carver responded. [Quoting:]

I'll sum it up as to the people who have given me lots of support for the last two or three years. Every one of them said, "Dick, the judge came in there with a strong feeling for Nye County and he only got stronger as the motions were discussed."

As you can see, we had a lot of public support there [While I was present at the Friday hearing, the court was "packed" to capacity, as was the outside waiting area. I was not allowed entry into the overflowing courtroom.] and it did make a big difference to the judge because as he walked through the door coming into the courtroom he took a double-take when he saw that you couldn't put one more person into that courtroom.

But, watching the expression on his face and how he was involved with the federal government when they made their presentation—he just sat there and looked at them. When the Nye County attorneys made their presentation, he was up on the edge of his chair; he was very active; he had a smile on his face; he was asking good questions for clarification only, not bringing up anything new. He always said, “For clarification...” And, looking at the smiles on the Nye County attorneys, I just think, and everybody felt, that when we left there he was a lot stronger in favor of Nye County than when he started.

I think Nye County has the two best attorneys in America working on this case who are in the lead. There are a lot of other attorneys who are working too, who are also important, but John Howard and Roger Marzulla are just super-attorneys at trial. It just makes you feel awful good.

The thing that we've always said out here, and I've been preaching it now for 18 months; this is not a legal question that we needed to go to court to get answered. This is a political strategy and when there is enough public support, there's going to be a political victory. And that's what it's all about.

What you see going on in America right now is the Supreme Court is really bringing up some strong Constitutional issues and ruling on them and I think we've got a real super-judge right here who wants to be part of the winning team and is going to make a decision that the Supreme Court won't have to overturn. [End quoting.]

When asked if he had any closing comments to make to the CONTACT readers, Carver said, “I just want to take the time to thank all the people in America for their support of Nye County's position. The people are what is making it work, it's not me. You know, Nye County's out here—a county entity trying to stick up for the people's rights and those are: the rights to recreate, hunt and fish and access of public lands. We do not advocate selling the lands. We are not going to go out and close access. We're here to do what the people want and I think that the public is hungry for elected officials to stand-up and do what the people want, rather than their own personal agendas.”

I commented to Carver that our readers will be very glad to hear his position of non-violence and people not getting hurt, to which he responded, “That's right. That's our very first concern.”

In an interview with CONTACT on 8/4/95, Attorney John Howard commented, in response to a question whether Judge George has the courage to make a favorable ruling in this case. [Quoting:]

I believe Judge George does have the courage to make a favorable ruling in this case. Let me say this: There are two different questions here that I want to clarify. I believe he has the courage and the insight to give us a favorable ruling. Whether he will is another question. Not because of a lack of courage, and not because of a lack of insight but because he may not agree with us.

Let me tell you that, there is a possibility that he will go against us for a very logical reason. Let me run by you, why. I could conceive of a judge in good faith, intelligent, courageous, saying that he has looked at the equal footing argument; that he has read the cases that support the equal footing argument; that he thinks that maybe that should be the law—but that, up until now, the United States Supreme Court has not, has not applied equal footing to the kind of land we are talking about. And because it hasn't, he as a non-activist, conservative judge could easily say to himself, "Look, that hasn't happened yet. It might, but it hasn't. And until it does, I think I'm bound not to make law here." Now, that would be a very conservative way of doing it, politically conservative way of going about this. And I would not blame him for one second. I would disagree with him. I would say that it seems to me that he has that power and he should exercise it. But, I can see a conservative judge, normally talking against judicial activism, taking that position and I wouldn't hold it against him.

I will say, I think he has the courage to do it. But, I don't want to say that he will do it because I don't want to...you know, suggest to anybody that that's necessarily going to happen. It's going to take a lot of courage, a lot of insight, a lot of intelligence, and also a willingness to see the issue in the way we see it.

The one case that is very clear about the issue is the Pollard case. In the Pollard case the court said that as long as the federal government retains land inside a state, it is not under equal footing with the other states. Its real simple. Real simple.

So, I think it is clear that we're right. The question is, "What will happen?" [End quoting.]

When asked what the impact will be if a favorable ruling is brought forth, Howard responded, [Quoting:]

I, and the people I work with, will be extraordinarily busy. Because I think the first thing that would happen is that we would start getting calls from a lot different states and counties saying, "We want in on this. We want to start working on this." And I think we would be filing lawsuits all over the country. That's one outcome. That's probably the least important outcome because, you know what I think would really happen? I think Congress would step in and say, "You know, we've got a little problem here. Maybe we need to solve it legislatively. And I think that is what they would do, solve it legislatively and I hope they do.

Let me just say to you, there are a lot of people who like to hold onto cases for their own purposes. I know lawyers who would just as soon lose a case so that he could talk about....so he could make some money or something. I don't care. I want the principle to be vindicated.

As far as I'm concerned, I would rather have Congress do this now. Congress should be doing this. Congress should redress this historic grievance. Congress should look at this thing and say, "Look, the people in the West have been disadvantaged. The states in the West are less than equal. And we need to do this because it's right."

The environmentalists should be dancing in the streets over this. They should be behind us one hundred and fifty percent. And the reason they should is this: State lands, state operated lands are much better managed and much more environmentally protected than federal lands. There is just no question about that.

Secondly, overgrazing is nothing in terms of a public issue—nothing. It does no environmental damage, relatively speaking in comparison to the storage of hazardous or nuclear waste. Right now the federal government is taking the position that they can pretty much dump nuclear waste where-ever the hell they want to. It's their land and they can do what they want. The environmentalists don't realize just how really horrible that is. Perhaps they will realize how horrible, and will just say, "Look, how do we solve the problem?" Well, the way we solve the problem is that we make sure that the land is owned by the state so it can't be done that way. They don't do that because they are so tied-in to the federal government as being their only friend. And they're wrong about that. It's just a sort of unreasoning, lemming-like approach that they take to all this stuff. [End quoting.]

When asked to comment on Carver's statement about this not being a legal issue but a political strategy, Howard said, [quoting:]

Well, Dick Carver is wrong. This is a legal question. This is a Constitutional question. This is a question of whether or not we believe in federalism, whether or not we really have a federal system. It has nothing to do with political strategy.

I do believe that part of the reason for these cases is to create the political atmosphere or the possibility that political action can be taken that will solve the problem, rather than having the courts do it. But that is not the reason I'm doing it. The reason I'm doing it is because I have, what I consider to be, a great and important legal issue that must be vindicated. Federalism is important. It's not a game.

What you have in most of these states is two governments. And you have an over-government and an under-government. You have a group of people who live in the states who are governed by a state government but who are suppose to have control over the government in their state. They have no control over the federal government. So, they have, essentially a huge colony in the middle of their state—in your state, Nevada, 88%. The state legislature of Nevada has no control over anything that happens in the state of Nevada, except on 12% of the land. Where is their sovereignty? Why not just redraw the borders so you have the borders reflect the real size of the state? You were in better shape, much better shape, when you were a territory. Because when you were a territory, at least you had a territorial legislature that had the right to make decisions regarding every square inch of land in your state. Now what you have is a state legislature that has the ability to make decisions over 12% of the state and you have the rest of it, 88% governed by some unelected bureaucrat in Washington who nobody knows. [End quoting.]

Nye County, Nevada is not alone in the struggle to extricate the federal government's stranglehold. Numerous legislative actions have been taken across the nation at both the state and county level in an effort to reclaim sovereign, local administration of government. Catron County, New Mexico is probably the most widely known example of such bold new measures to reclaim self-rule under the Constitution, which were passed as early as August and September 1990. This was just the beginning for Catron County. In an interview with CONTACT on 8/4/95, Attorney for the Catron County Commissioners, Jim Catron shared the progression of events leading to the present. [Quoting:]

In 1990, the Commission passed a series of Ordinances that were County embodiment or enactment of federal regs, executive orders. The idea was, if the federal agents won't obey these laws, if the U.S. Attorney won't make them obey them, if their bureaucratic superiors won't make them obey them, the idea was that maybe they would obey the same laws if there was some sort of County presence in the thing. It wasn't a good idea. It was far too confrontational. It created a lot of heat and absolutely no light.

It painted us as radicals.

I hadn't drawn those—I didn't ever think it would work but I was a new county attorney and they weren't inclined to listen to me. But then, reading regs and working with other people, we discovered that NEPA (National Environmental Protection Agency) and the CEQ regs that implement NEPA in any County government that has its own environmental protection plan—to reduce duplication requires the feds to give that County joint environmental planning powers, joint environmental research, joint environmental analysis, joint public hearings, and joint EISs. And so, we passed a sort of a miniature NEPA, creating the maximum amount of duplication to get the maximum amount of joint planning.

The Forest Service fought us terribly. We decided we would go first to the Forest Service. They are not the real villain out here, from our point of view. It is the Fish and Wildlife Service. But the Forest Service, their agents on the ground out there, live among us. They intermarry with us. Their children go to school with our children. You know, there is kind of a “they are us” kind of a thing with the Forest Service. So we asked the Forest Service, once we had done this, we wrote them a letter and said, “We, under 40CFR1506.2, we have our own Environmental Protection Plan, we are asserting our joint planning powers with you—from this day forward, do this, do this, and do that. They resisted.

We had to pay for half of a trainer from a private company that trains federal agents in compliance with NEPA and CEQ, to come and teach the Forest Service people what we were saying was true. First, we had to train the trainer and convince the trainers that we were right. They were convinced. Then they talked to the Forest Service people and our people in a joint session. Out of that joint session, we managed to complete a Memorandum of Understanding that we had started a year before as to what constitutes joint planning. When do we get the notice? When are we entitled to joint planning? When do we give notices? What is our input? We are not an interested public, we are a government.

And so, either a year-and-a-half or two-and-a-half ago—the Forest Service is beginning to understand this and use it. Our Gila National Forest people, we have District Rangers now who are executing agreements with us, and giving us notice, and giving us more input. When you start a scoping process, that's when you start asking questions. What are the issues? The public at large, the Cattlemen's Association and the Wilderness Society don't get into that. They are not entitled to that early input. But the governments are. On other projects, we are granted co-operating agency status. That's all in the law.

The Memorandum of Understanding has no rights in it other than what we already have as a matter of law. It was a distillation, an abstract of existing law. And we are proceeding a little more harmoniously than we used to. But the Fish and Wildlife Service, we're not getting along with. We have to sue them. They deny that NEPA applies to them. NEPA says it applies to them. Three different District Judges in the West have said it applies to them. The 9th Circuit says it doesn't. We have one before the 10th Circuit, we'll see what the 10th Circuit says. Our approach has been to, if you will pardon the phrase, strangle them in their own red tape.

Mr. Carver has decided to cut the Gordian knot and go right at the question of, “Where in the Constitution do you have an enumerated power to hold these lands?” And, oddly enough, Jack Ward Thomas, Chief of the Forest Service, recently filed an affidavit in that lawsuit saying that Nye County has no reason to be so rebellious. We're getting along famously with Catron County. And then, attaches the MOU (Memorandum of Understanding) to the Exhibit, as an Exhibit to the Affidavit which is somewhat ironic because, for several years, they regarded us as pure heathens. We were pagans and outlaws. We were radicals and we were demanding things that we had no right to demand. And our position has never changed since we started this joint-planning push. We have not changed positions. It is the Forest Service that has gone from calling us pagans, heathens, outlaws and radicals to “co-operating neighbors”. We haven’t changed our position. We have always insisted that the law says “joint”. If you have your own EPA, you’re entitled to joint planning. We are pushing for it.

The Forest Service is very, very begrudgingly moving its feet in our direction. But, my County Commissioners are not radical people. These are property owning, responsible people. They are conservative. And they do not get radical. They want to know that what they are doing is within the law. And, of course, that’s our approach.

Nye County, Dick Carver used to come to conferences where I would speak and he took my words and went down another path. I am grateful to him because, we’re no longer the radicals. We’re now co-operating neighbors. And we wouldn’t be in that position if Mr. Carver had not taken a different course of action than we. There are a lot of arguments that are culturally correct, historically correct, morally correct, probably legally and Constitutionally correct, but I am very cynical when it comes to federal courts. And, so, while I remain hopeful that he will win, I am skeptical.

In this situation we have to measure our progress in millimeters. And we are inching along toward a better relationship with the Forest Service. The Fish and Wildlife Service, we are in mortal combat. We are in court on issues regarding NEPA, regarding CEQ regs. The Forest Service, we have issues with them where we might wind up in court with. For example, they’ve decided that in the reissuance of grazing permits, they have decided that the “no change alternative” means no grazing. The no change alternative, is clearly, demonstratively, status quo “anti”. They are changing that by fiat to read, “No Grazing” and that is contrary to the law. We may have to sue them over that.

You have to understand that there are individuals involved in any governmental agency, and so we have District Rangers who try very hard to comply with NEPA, CEQ. We have District Rangers who say, “The hell with that red tape, this is my National Forest and I am running it and this is not the Catron County National Forest.” So, it is also not District Ranger Jones’ National Forest. And so, there are hard-headed people on both sides of any, any major public issue.

I’m not saying that we are in rosy relationship with the Forest Service. I am saying that we are far, far less close to real tragedies than we were. There are still some District Rangers who are not being given proper guidance by their administrative superiors, who have decided that we are going to use this NEPA process for the renewal of grazing permits as an excuse to cut herds. But that’s not going to work, and if we have to, we’ll sue them because, well, to start with there are about 45,000 head of cattle in Catron County and we, by the time their dollars circulate we get about $14.50 in taxes on each of those cows. Since they destroyed the logging industry, that IS our County revenue. And without it, we don’t have a County. We don’t have a budget. We’ll just be absorbed into the surrounding Counties and we will be a drain on the state and federal finances forever. If they cut every herd in the County 50-60-40%, God, they’re cutting into our school children’s schools and our County roads and our law enforcement. We have a financial stake in seeing that the Forest Service does not take advantage of this decision to comply with NEPA for the first time in twenty something years. [End quoting.]

When asked if he was familiar with a lawsuit which was just filed last week by the National Cattlemen's Association regarding Rangeland Reform, Catron responded. [Quoting:]

No, I know that we in Catron County and New Mexico commenced a process to file a lawsuit against Rangeland '94, we were assured by our congressional people who they would take care of it; that we didn't have to file this lawsuit. We call it Range Land Reform '94—that Congress would see to it that Babbitt and the people in those agencies, did not succeed in accomplishing their complete destruction of the grazing rights.

I met, several times, with the National Cattlemen's Association Board of Directors to try to make a joint—between us and them—effort to bring one lawsuit against it. They would not work with us because we bore the name of Catron County and we are too radical. You have to understand that there are personalities involved in this also. There are people who are personalities who are involved in this also. There are people who are on our end of this thing that those industries that you are naming do not get along with because there are people in Catron County who have taken hardlines in the past. I'm talking about 10 years, 20 years, who have alienated other people. And so they went on their own and they already filed their lawsuit. I'm surprised.

We just learned last week that Senator Domenici says that Livestock Grazing Act is dead and so, I'm glad that they filed their lawsuit because that Rangeland Reform '94 is so contrary to their Congressional Mandate. It exceeds the authority granted to them in the delegation of lawmaking powers. It violates the separation of powers doctrine. There are many, many legal or statutory or Constitutional problems with Range Land Reform '94, and so, I'm glad to hear that they've done it. They have not communicated with us. I did not know that suit had been filed. [End quoting.]

Another political movement toward independence has occurred as a result of the so-called 10th Amendment Resolution which claims states' rights and state sovereignty under the Constitution. This state Amendment has swept the nation and has been passed by numerous states, and is being considered in many, many others.

Charles Duke, Colorado State Representative, and sponsor of the 10th Amendment Resolution which ultimately passed in his state and served as a model in many others, sounds remarkably like Dick Carver in his comments during an interview with CONTACT on April 1, 1994. When asked what he is trying to accomplish, Duke commented. [Quoting:]

This comes about as a result of the myriad of Federal mandates that are coming down from Washington. Many of these, of course, come with money and some without. Either one is equally bad. And many of these mandates that are coming down are in violation of the United States Constitution. They are just ignoring the Constitution in Washington, D.C. and sending whatever, you know, dictatorial edicts that they wish to down to the states. I can give you several clear examples. HR6 is one of those. You probably already know about HR6 but the reauthorization of OSHA is another one. This tobacco thing—that's where they are trying to ban tobacco smoking in all buildings, etc., etc. That's a direct violation of local control, even this America 2000 program they are putting in place, in my opinion, is a violation of that, although it is more permissive than many mandates are.

Anyway, this being a violation, the 10th Amendment of the United States Constitution states that the powers granted to the federal government are enumerated in the United States Constitution, and all other powers reserved to the states. So, what this was put in place for was a protection against abusive power that they could not anticipate in 1776. And how wise they were; I mean, it's unbelievable how wise they were. They had just come from England, of course, which was under the strong domination of the Church of England. They knew what abusive power really meant and even in those days, so, they put those in. In fact, if they had not put those in, some of the original backers of the Constitution refused to sign it and so they put that in as a concession. That kind of held in place for about 150 years, but in the last 50 or 70 years, we have kind of drifted away from that in marked difference from the way the country is supposed to be and the federal government is just essentially taking the Constitution and just trashing it, doing whatever they can to subjugate the American people to the will of the power mongers in Washington.

And so the resolution makes the case and restates the 10th Amendment and then it makes the case for the fact that the federal government is really our agent, not the other way around. We are not their agent. They are our agent. We created them. We can uncreate them. Then it says that, based on the 10th Amendment, that the state of Colorado hereby claims sovereignty over all powers not otherwise enumerated and granted to the federal government by the United States Constitution. A claim to sovereignty is essentially an international proclamation of independence, if you will, and so it is more than just a statement, more than just a position. [End quoting.]

And now, last week, a lawsuit is brought against the Department of the Interior for misrepresenting current public land resource conditions and the impact of livestock in its Rangeland Reform regulations, scheduled to take effect on August 21.

The plaintiffs, the Public Lands Council (PLC), the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF), the National Cattlemen's Association (NCA), the American Sheep Industry Association (ASIA), and the Association of National Grasslands (ANG), together with state affiliates and individual ranchers, filed the complaint because the new regulations violate federal law and would do harm to federal lands ranchers.

In a statement by the Plaintiffs, "We have no choice but to sue the Department of the Interior in order to save the Western communities, wildlife and homes and businesses of thousands of ranchers who would be put out of business by the regulations. Congress has precious little time to act to override the rules before implementation begins. We are hopeful that a federal judge will intervene and stop the new regulations. At the same time, we continue to support the efforts of Congress to resolve this issue as well."

The ranching industry's decision to simultaneously support a legislative fix and litigation clearly demonstrates the seriousness of the threat posed by the regulations.

These regulations, published Feb. 22, made sweeping changes in the administration of livestock grazing on federal lands that flatly contradict either the language or the underlying policy of the Taylor Grazing Act, Federal Land Policy and Management Act and the Public Rangelands Improvement Act. The plaintiffs will ask the court to review the regulations under the Administrative Procedures Acts and the National Environmental Protection Act (NEPA) to declare them invalid and stop their implementation.

“The Administration has ignored overwhelming opposition and criticism and has adopted the Babbitt regulations even though there is scant evidence that the regulations will achieve the stated environmental goals,” the plaintiffs said. “There is substantial evidence the regulations contradict or exceed existing statutory authority.”

The suit argues that the Final Environmental Impact Statement used to justify the changes in the regulation misrepresents and ignores the scientific opinion of the best scientists in the country. The evidence runs contrary to assumptions, analysis, and conclusions in the regulations proposed by Babbitt. The rules omit the direct, indirect and cumulative environmental impacts caused by significantly reducing or removing livestock grazing from the public lands or development of private lands adjacent to the public lands; and fail to adequately respond to material public comments.

Ranchers say that the regulations will impair their ability to maintain open spaces, fish and wildlife habitat, and undeveloped water for the benefit of all Americans because such efforts must be cost effective.

In a further statement by the plaintiffs in this case, “The new rules eliminate the grazing preference, which has been used by ranchers as collateral to obtain loans for capital expenditures and annual operating expenses. The department would allow unilateral reduction in grazing based on a one-point-in-time assessment using untested criteria and methodology; and increase the costs of operation to where it will no longer be feasible for many of the ranchers to remain in the ranching business.”

What becomes abundantly clear in examining these few examples of lawsuits being filed by informed individuals and organizations across the country, there is a groundswell of activity which clearly states that the federal government has overstepped its bounds. It is through legal, lawful claims such as these filed within the system that tremendous progress can be made in an effort to return individual sovereignty to the county and state governments.

The examples presented herein represent mature, responsible approaches to legislative and political reform that offer a guiding light to floundering organizations everywhere, who perpetually ask the question, “What can we do?” You have the blueprint for action, the only question is, will you use it?

THE NEWS DESK

by Phyllis Linn 8/8/95

MEDICARE PROBE TARGETS HOSPITALS

Here's a good place to start, as you shall see. This article is from the July 20 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

Florida's hospitals are next on the hit list of a national probe into Medicare overcharges, and many may be exposed to potentially devastating million-dollar fines. The U.S. Justice Department [Isn't that Waco-Reno?] is investigating double-billing of Medicare by 4,600 of the nation's 5,300 hospitals. [Wow! That's a bunch.]

The investigation does not involve criminal fraud. However, the government is threatening the hospitals with civil prosecution under the False Claims Act, saying there has been "reckless disregard" or "deliberate ignorance" of federal rules, said Larry Selkowitz, an assistant U.S. attorney in Harrisburg, Pa. The effort to collect the money began late last year in Pennsylvania and will soon expand nationwide, state by state, overseen by the U.S. Attorney's Office in Harrisburg.

If prosecutors proceed with legal action, the hospitals could face large fines, because the law allows the government to collect three times the amount it lost, plus $5,000 to $10,000 per false claim. [Any beanbrain could have foreseen that the Medicare program would quickly be rampant with abuses such as this. So why is this clean up happening now? Well, it's not hard to imagine a scenario in which manmade "natural" disasters, such as earthquakes, heat waves, and diseases—even riots—create a need for emergency medical care. But what if that care is no longer available? It's not a pretty sight, except to the twisted minds of the puppetmasters. Depopulation and total control are at the top of their wish list.]

LONG, HOT SUMMER: IT'S NO ACCIDENT!

From the July 20 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

CHICAGO—As the death toll from the scorching heat wave climbed to 436 on Wednesday, the questions mounted as well. Chicago's fire and police departments, hospitals, and Mayor Richard M. Daley were called on to answer for the numbing loss of life. "People were calling 911 and...were told there were no ambulances available," said State Sen. Robert Raica, a Chicago Republican who plans hearings next week. [Get the picture??]

The death toll in Cook County rose by 60 since Tuesday to 436. Officials expected the toll to climb further. Nationwide, last week's blistering combination of heat and humidity in the Northeast and Midwest claimed at least 730 lives.

From the July 25 ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

OKLAHOMA CITY—Powerful thunderstorms Monday with wind gusting to 97 mph knocked out electricity to an estimated 59,000 customers. There were no immediate reports of injuries. The air traffic control tower at Will Rogers World Airport had to be evacuated temporarily just after 12:30 a.m. and several incoming flights were diverted because of the wind, dispatcher Terry Wells said. The storms also pounded the area with tennis ball-size hail. [No doubt there is more than meets the eye here!]

From the July 6 BILLINGS GAZETTE, [quoting:]

BOZEMAN (AP)—Keep an eye on the sky. Abrupt weather changes, high winds and intense heat increase your chance of being attacked by a grizzly bear in Yellowstone National Park, say local bear researchers. The heat raises their adrenaline level, which can produce a more aggressive response from the monarchs of the forests...[The Elite are well aware of this response in humans, as well, and are directing it to their advantage in their “Long Hot Summer ’95”, which is still heating up. You’ve heard the expression: “Keep your cool”!]

BUSH-TOID NEARLY DROWNS

Remember when Bush had a near-death experience in Japan a few years back (a beaming, perhaps?) and just got up next day and continued on with business-as-usual? This behavior, characteristic of robotoids, was repeated in Newfoundland, as reported in the July 27 issue of THE GAZETTE, MONTREAL, [quoting:]

ST. JOHN’S, Nfld.—Former U.S. President George Bush nearly drowned in a bog hole during a fishing trip in Newfoundland earlier this month [Just before Bohemian Grove, I guess.] Craig Dobbin, a Newfoundlander, who owns St. John’s-based Canadian Helicopters, was Bush’s host for one of his now-routine fishing trips to the province July 10. Bush was at Dobbin’s cabin in an isolated region of south-central Newfoundland. The former president and 19 others went out in three helicopters to fish, but fog forced them to land for a moment. Bush went for a walk and stumbled into the bog hole—a place where decayed plant matter, or peat, mixes with water. [Sorry, but there is something rather fitting about that.] “Within a matter of seconds the president was up to his armpits. The ladies in the group [The article said Barbara Bush was not in attendance, so knowing Bush, one wonders about these “ladies” fluttering nearby.] noticed he was in distress,” said Dobbin. “They shouted, ‘The president is down.’ [Down? A curious expression for ladies to use. What ever happened to “Eeeek! Help!”] The RCMP and secret service responded immediately.” He added: “If these ladies had not spotted him, he was a dead man.”

Dobbin said the agents had a hard time trying to free Bush from a hole that turned out to be almost three meters deep. “It was not a big deal to him. He got out of there, wanted to get on with his fishing, and fished right through that day. [Some kind of macho guy, eh?]

“RECOVERED MEMORIES” SYNDROME

The following was excerpted from an article by Michael Freeny, which appeared in the July 23 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

Recently, at a professional seminar hosted by Johns Hopkins University Medical School, I found myself sitting in a sea of alleged pedophiles. It was an angry sea, churning with rage, spouting white caps. Well, white hair anyway, for this was a curious collection of middle-aged and older couples, average moms and pops, the stuff of Norman Rockwell. There was something terribly incongruous about this group of alleged child molesters. Take, for instance, Betty R., plump, robust, 60ish, looking like she'd just taken cookies from the oven. Unfortunately, she was accused of a more bizarre culinary custom—serving and devouring dead babies during the ritual sexual abuse of her child. At least that is what her 33-year-old daughter had “recovered” in therapy as a long, forgotten childhood memory of dear old mom.

If this were an unusual case it could be dismissed as an aberration, a potential tabloid headline. But it appears there may be as many as 500,000 instances of false “recovered memories”, each with the potential to disrupt or destroy lives, marriages and families.

As a therapist and family clinician I wanted to help these victims with their pain, stand up for their rights and undo the damage. But these families felt ravaged by therapists, and as a member of that profession, I was now classified “unsafe”.

The conference focused on a controversial notion of memory known as repression, an unconscious forgetting of a disturbing experience or event. Unlike conventional forgetting, repression allegedly stores undesirable thoughts in the unconscious [His term, not ours!], where they continue to influence our everyday behavior. It's a tantalizing concept that speaks to our individual complexity. For those who believe this view of memory, the task of treatment is to help the client uncover the repressed material and deal with it consciously.

Unfortunately, after 100 years of examination, no one has proven that Freud's “primary defense mechanism” even exists. [Tell that to your government's MK-ULTRA Monarch Mind-Control programmers, who use it daily in their “work”.] A great deal of memory research says it does not.... If science can't prove that repression exists, can it prove that false memories exist? Fortunately there is solid scientific evidence on how false memories can be created, even in nondistressed people. [Well sure! This is another Monarch trick-of-the-trade.]

The courts are turning a skeptical eye to the entire notion of repressed memories and now require more substantive proof. Unfortunately it has taken almost 100 years to realize the truth of these false memories. [We ought to, again, ask ourselves: Why is this article featured NOW? Perhaps the efforts of Cathy O'Brien and Mark Phillips and others to unmask Monarch Project criminals are making a few bigwigs uncomfortable—hence, the need to mount a massive discrediting effort with articles like this “recovered memories” piece. It DOES lay the foundation to discredit those who come forth with valid accusations, such as Cathy and other former mind-control slaves. “Recovered memories syndrome” IS a valid charge. It is no trick at all to create artificial memories in the mind. We've probably all done it to ourselves accidentally a time or two! The Elite (who control the “helping professions”—remember the Protocols?) can use this to destroy the reputations of their enemies. Monarch and other mind-control organizations have this down to a fine art, although they do their “best” work in the area of repression of memories.]

MORE MAYHEM:
GANG ACTIVITY IN THE MILITARY

WASHINGTON—Street gang activity that once was confined to South-Central Los Angeles, Chicago and New York’s Harlem has been reported throughout the U.S. military, Newsweek magazine reported on Saturday. The magazine reported in its July 24 issue that Los Angeles gangs such as the Crips and the Bloods, and Chicago’s Folk Gangsters are active in all four branches of the armed services and at more than 50 military bases. It said most gang crimes, such as drug trafficking, robbery, assault and at least 10 cases of homicide, have taken place off base, but that army enlisted men have been photographed flashing gang signs during the Gulf War. It also said that some gangs stake out “turf” on aircraft carriers at sea.

“The military doesn’t like to admit (its gang problem),” Sgt. Wes McBride of the Los Angeles Police Department, himself a former Marine, told the magazine, “because it destroys the image of discipline.” [But isn’t that just the reason it’s been allowed to go on: To further erode the ability of the military to defend its citizens? There are precious few accidents in this game of wits!]

GLOBAL ETHICS FOR A “SPIRITUAL U.N.”

From a recent article in the SAN JOSE MERCURY NEWS, [quoting:]

San Francisco’s Grace Cathedral will be filled Sunday with 10 choirs and more than 150 religious leaders representing at least 43 spiritual traditions from around the world. [Quite the spiritual extravaganza!] There will be ambassadors, hundreds of young people from different nations, and special guests, including Polish President Lech Walesa, U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali and maybe President Clinton. The interfaith celebration of the United Nations’ 50th anniversary will include the reading of a Baha’i prayer for unity (in Persian) and the singing of Beethoven’s “Ode To Joy”. Then near the conclusion of the service, one of the young people [a ploy to appeal to the emotions] will present a challenge to the congregation and the world: that representatives of all the great religions should sit down as a permanent body in San Francisco and spend the next 50 years learning to cooperate, rather than fight, in the name of God. [Sounds good, doesn’t it? TOO good to be true, however. We readers-of-CONTACT were not born yesterday! We are not so easily fooled by words like “peace”, which to the Elite means “absence of opposition to the NWO agenda”, and “cooperation”, which has about the same definition. And what about “God”? Another clever ploy to deceive the gullible! Theirs is the god of Darkness.]

Many have attended an interfaith conference called “Celebrating the Spirit: Toward a Global Ethic” and were to sit together at a dozen or more events to discuss joint improvements to neighborhoods and the planet. [Not only is this a prison planet—it’s a lunatic asylum! Hmmm, what are WE doing here??]

A TIME FOR SORTING, THE TIME FOR KNOWING

The following magnificent writing has been extracted from pages 32 through 36 of the beautiful little JOURNAL #7 called THE RAINBOW MASTERS. We all get enough caught up in the day-to-day unfolding of this “play” that The Larger Picture is easily overlooked or forgotten, especially when that ornery rascal, the Adversary, appears to be having one helluva party on this planet right now.

Yet, as the sparkling energy, Archangel Michael, quickly points out, “The evil ones cower for they know it is all but finished; but they shall go most formidably—but they, too, must serve in the time of cleansing and sorting, for ones must be ‘caused’ to choose.”

As you read this writing and become revitalized by the breathtaking perspective that Archangel Michael is herein sharing, keep foremost in mind the question he rhetorically asks for your meditation: “What is the purpose of the schoolroom of Earth?” The answer is as Wonderous and Warm as the Universes are spacious and full of Creator’s Lighted Ideas. Read on and enjoy! —Dr. Edwin M. Young, Editor-In-Chief

9/26/89 #3 ARCHANGEL MICHAEL

AVA RAMA SHEOI—GREETINGS, BELOVED ONES, MICHAEL IN THY PRESENCE.

Oh, if you could but know the glory that exceeds Creation’s Light as the heavens rejoice at this time of wondrous Ascension. As the brothers of thy Cosmic fleets fill the spaces about thy Earth, we know that this is the time when man, looking up at starlit night, shall begin to see and understand and the great “knowing” shall enter into his heart. We are there, friends, we are all here awaiting the commencement. The evil ones cower for they know it is all but finished, but they shall go most formidably—but they, too, must serve in the time of cleansing and sorting for ones must be “caused” to choose. Amen and Amen.

THE DAY OF THE GREAT TELLING

The Day of the Great “Telling” that has been prophesied now becomes imminent when your affairs shall become more chaotic. You must now avail yourselves of your full armor, for the time of Lighted Protection is at hand. Do not fear the brilliance of the armor for it shall also serve as passport into the higher places—your shield. Man must also know you that he might have a place to seek his shelter.

The twenty-four elders are awaiting you, and the Father speaks of you as His beloved sons in whom He is rejoicing for service well done. AVE ELOI!

You are now approaching a time when it is of vast importance that you speak out so that many souls might be lifted in their final stage of development. Shortly, all secrets shall be revealed in the Light of the new day when nothing can stand that is hidden, nothing that is dark shall not be exposed to the Light. It must be done in such a way that man, who has become cynical and superstitious, shall be guided within rather than turned away. Some of the secret myths will wither and fall to decay; others shall spring forth in response to the new energy but all shall be set to Truth.

Man has attained a summit of his creation upon Earth. It has served its age-long purpose, and now he stands atop a mountain. Man on Earth does not even recognize his circumstance nor his gifts. Listen most carefully during these most stressful times that you discern the Black Dragon bellows from the Light and voice of the Angels. The Dragon is as your Mockingbird who mimics the calls of Truth to bring upon you destruction.

There shall come a great and blinding Light and a crash of the thunders through the heavens. Then man shall be naked before his Creator and man will know, for all of history has only been lived and written that man may then know. Man has scaled the heights and depth of his experience on Earth to attain this position of knowledge and wisdom. Out of the rumblings and dust of the past he will hear his own voice which will command him. Some day soon, after the “Great Telling”, a multitude shall witness and hear the voice that speaks to them, the voice that swells as a thousand voices, yet only one, that says, “Come home, Earth, come home”.

COVENANT OF THE BOW

From this sphere of life is now emanating a golden mist that shall enclose your world even as from this sphere for countless millions of years your world has been enclosed in the golden radiance that has brought it heat and light, which is symbolic of the Father’s Divine Love and Divine Wisdom. That heat and light is to warm man’s physical being and to give him the flame of spiritual Life. For it is the affinity between this sphere and yours that makes for life and makes it possible for you to search for Truth.

Now from this sphere the ones with the Golden Helmets of the Commands of Light, your cosmic and galactic relations, have gathered as the gathering of the Eagles. This gathering is in response to the covenant of our Infinite Father, the covenant of the bow in the sky.

There shall shortly come into thy attention a bow stretched across thy heavens such as Earth-man has never seen before in all his memory, for the translation of a planet comes but once from third to fourth perception—but once. There are other progressions but each is only once! The bow across the sky shall be magnificent in color and will emanate musical sounds that shall come to the ear of all men, and they shall know a calling; they shall know a love; they shall know a duty—and they must be prepared unto that day, chelas of the words of Truth—man must be prepared by these words brought forth for such purpose.

From this bow of beauty, this bow of duty that calls to its own, it shall first appear as a great violet radiance over the entire world. Thy brothers in the heavens also await this moment of commencement. In ages past these ones have only appeared to Earth in a very few cases on very special errands for the Infinite Creator. They, WE of the Golden Helmets, will be known to you as the Archangels by title; we are the mentors of the angelic messengers from these realms. Some special ones are already serving among you in various specific duty. Be gentle for they differ and some are pulled from their pathway for they function most poorly in thy density and to them, all ones are blessed and seem to bear no evil. Ones are sent along as guardians but sometimes those ones, too, are fooled by the clever ways of the Dark Brothers. Ah, you thought it would be your “space cadets” of which I speak—no, for this document will be regarding the Cohans of the Etheric Rays and the Angelic Brotherhood who stand to serve of thee.

We now come forth, dear ones, for the final gathering of the golden chariots when they shall gather to subdue the last remains of the darkness upon this Earth Mother; for over the entire world a golden glow shall manifest itself, and when it lifts, those who remain will know truly that they are their brother’s keeper. This message will come to the selected scribes that each one’s traditional legends will finally blend in perfect harmony and all song will be as one voice and one language—unspoken but wholly understood.

This is our mission, for it will not be long when this sphere itself is no longer of use. This is always the work of those who live in the very center of their solar system, and under the golden corona of light. Man has always looked to this great orb for his very life, and rightly so that he should so do.

THE CHORD SHALL BE STRUCK

There is a new chord (actually old, but you have forgotten), that is most real. But it shall cause man to be enthused that he would even seek to themselves to apply feather and wax to develop wings with which they might fly up to that great music. Ah, and ’tis a tender tale of the youth who would fly to his freedom with waxen wings. Yet he flew too close and without discernment and his waxen wings melted. He had thought that to reach the Golden Sun he might learn all the mysteries of mysteries—for you see, those of your ancient ancestors understood the importance of that wondrous source of light—they did not believe the orb was but heat and flames; they understood it to be the centre and life of this System.

Ah, but now that body is in great age, as celestial bodies do age in the sequence of universal movement, that ones might change their stations and progress and move ever onward in the journey back into Creator. Just as we know no time nor space, we are, however, connected inseparably from you of manifested format and thus we must count “time” as do you. This old sun has now existed for over fifteen hundred billions of years. It will exist its allotted time and then it will explode as a star explodes—but again, the end is only the beginning, for it has served us well and we all march onward. Humanity and we within this System will march on to other portions of the Father’s realms, for they are infinite.

THOUGHT

This orb, however, shall not end until the Millennium is well passed, when once again the Forces of Darkness are released. Then shall the end come and this System disintegrateth in thought. FOR IT ALL IS ONLY THOUGHT! All celestial bodies, whether star or world, are only the forms in which our Father Creator forms His Words. They are His Words that were spoken in the beginning that there should be Light and there should be substance. They are but His Words, and some shall disintegrate in thought—that which was only thought in the beginning.

Some day, in thy contemplable future, you shall look upon a great purple plain ahead, a golden light that draws you to it by its heat and warmth. Imagine what awaits those of Earth who have proved themselves to be His children—for the soul is endless, dear friends. They shall not want for Truth. For lo, these many centuries our Father has heard the words of the sincere call from Earth—the petition is now to gain response in its glorious fullness.

It shall be on Earth as it is in Heaven. Man shall no longer want for anything. He shall shortly take his place within the God places as a son of God for thy inheritance has been held in truth for your acceptance. Ye will behold that which is beyond thy imaginings in thy present state.

Even as you go about your mundane activities of the day, search those deep places of your heartplace. Realize that this is the time we have been awaiting. The Great Master Teacher will close of the circle and again come forth upon this place of Earth. We all await with great joy for you to come into your knowledge as the Truth goes forth upon the lands.

THE CREATION CALLED EVER-NESS

Above all, The Creation IS—the Omniverse—the whole of The Creation is above ALL. There is the PERFECT ONE, THE INFINITE FATHER, THE ALL CREATOR AND BEYOND IS THE CREATION, HIS MANIFESTED SELF.

What is behind the plan now unfolding upon the Earth? There IS a greater plan beyond, even beyond the migration from this Solar System, as we gave you before, and the answer to that is that we are being called from out of the depths of night in space to serve those who cry out unto us.

What is the purpose of the schoolroom of Earth? What means all the tears, sorrow, death, misery, and anguish? You must develop and learn, yes, but what of the Greater Plan? Would it only be that the world would become a dust of ashes from an atomic holocaust? Nay. The lesson to be learned is that Spirit (soul) may come to know itself, that man might be freed from the blight of the great lie of evil and grow into his whole-ness.

The Earth is a school for wondrous fragments of the Father. It is so written that the harvest is great but the laborers few. Well, in relative comparison the harvest is great according to the laborers, but from the total of Earth's population, the Harvest is small indeed. It has taken years—millions and millions of years—since man has been upon Earth to bring about this one small concentrated drop of life to evolve in the crucible of time.

EARTH IS SPECIAL

Here is where Dharma will cringe for what I will say represents blasphemy to the multitudes who have been victims of the great lie.

The Earth is a classroom for GODHOOD—to raise the God fragments in stature to again be one with that Source. The Earth is the finely tuned instrument for the lessons—not Mars, nor Venus, nor Jupiter, nor magnificent Saturn, nor spiritual Neptune, Pluto nor Mercury—not even the wondrous Sun or its many bodies. The lotus rises from the slime of earth. And now, brothers, there is a single bloom, so to speak, opening from the muck and shortly HE will reach forth and pluck it to take it home again. WE HAVE ALL

COME FORTH TO BRING YOU HOME!

TRANSMUTATION PREPARATION

Therefore, you and your fellow-men are being conditioned for a great transmutation—all who will come into the Light. Then we can march on to other worlds and universes that cry out for help. You who think you cease your work by graduation ceremonies must think again—your work will only have begun. You are now being prepared for other atmospheres and other dimensional formats—some are now making those transitions regularly. You will now be entering the dimension of total understanding. Accept that which the Father has for you. You will be leaving behind the density of travails of the old third dimension.

The physical, as it is developed, is only to serve for a brief time but within is the greatest period of learning. It appears that ye are but tiny sparks, ah, but you are most wondrous. For, as a tiny candle flame, we shall burst forth into an area that has never before known Light such as this and we shall bring Light, even as the workers brought to ancient Egypt, the Light—the one Light of Aton, through Akhenaton (yes, chela, ye shall again prevail). The people had never seen it before. Some it blinded, for it was too bright. They did not, just as today, understand because of its blinding light. It was a thing to be feared and shunned and many fell again into the comfort of the hiding places of darkness.

Man claims to fear the darkness! No, this is not true—man is afraid of Light. Light brings forth all his self-inflicted wounds for viewing and he prefers to hide that he might not be noticed for his deeds. No, it takes courage to go forth into the Light. Just as you look upon thy physical self and would make of the changes—how do you know you are not the perfection of God? Ye choose to set thy standards by fools in physical cloth. So be it.

Ye ones of this group have walked long and hard through the march of time—together. We shall again endure—oh yes, we shall.

Go, Dharma, and take rest for it has been a long day of work and stress.

I shield you with the Blue Light of Peace that you ones shall come into the calm sea and renew, for the path is yet long and drearysome. AVE! AU DA PAIDA CUM—GOD'S PEACE BE THY CLOAK WITHIN HIS WINGS OF GOLDEN DOWN. REST THY HEAD UPON THAT BREAST THAT YOU KNOW THY SOURCE. SO BE IT, AHO. I AM MICHAEL

BE ATTENTIVE TO NUDGES AS TRANSITION ACCELERATES by Esu “Jesus” Sananda 8/8/95 #1/T

Peace Thomas, Esu Present in Radiance. Yes, today is the eighth day of the eighth month—the birthing day of myself in that time long past now, lo those nearly two thousand years ago. It is but the mere blink of an eye in the realms where we dwell for you see, there is all of eternity in which to serve and create. It is glorious and we of these realms wonder whether man will awaken in time to the reality of Light and Creation.

Beloved ones, think not that we of the higher realms do not concern over your lessons and over your difficult journey. So, too, please keep in mind that they are your lessons and your journey! You ones in my service have returned for a purpose and the time to awaken to that purpose is almost past. It shall take great courage to continue this journey in service for the assaults shall come against you, but please remember that God in His Light shall Prevail and the adversary is, even now, in a mad scramble to compete for position in the fleeting physical world of power and greed. 'Tis truly sad, for even those of the adversary's team are given opportunity at this time to return to goodness, yet mostly they see not the opportunity placed before them and so we must watch as they sort themselves from participation in the Greatest Story Ever Told.

Don't you see? The Transition of this planet is the most magnificent event in your universe and beyond. All eyes, from all dimensions, are watching to see what will happen on this tiny orb of Shan. God has won; it is all but played out on this Stage of Creation. Always remember, chelas, store up your treasures in Heaven. Do not hide them where thieves enter to steal or where moths and dust doth corrupt. Choose carefully that which you focus your attention upon for that which a man focuses upon, there his heart is. Where is your heart these days, I may ask? Look to the greater good and the needs of another. Tend well thine preparations for I tell you in earnest the journey shall be arduous in its abrupt and shocking changes, both to the planetary surface and to the very lives you lead. If no money or electricity were available this day, how would you make it? What would you do, exactly? If no gas were available in Winter, how would you stay warm? Think on these things for they are of no idle concern. These are matters of sheer survival and shall present themselves more suddenly than you think! Ones in the cities, I am sorry to say, shall mostly not know what has hit them. The Chicago deaths from the heat-wave is nothing compared to that which is to come, soon!

You of mine I ask to stay in constant contact, for the instructions shall be rapid and many and I need alert workers. Thank you. Keep your focus clear and attentive, please, for the communications shall become most critical indeed. Concern yourself not over my birthday, for what is a birth day anyway? Look to thine Service and cling with all your strength unto the Light of God and The Creation for therein is literally eternal salvation.

Salu!

I Am Sananda

THE NEWS DESK

by Phyllis Linn 8/13/95

GENOCIDE IN THE BALKANS

Penetrating and thought-provoking describe the articles I've read so far in the July 31 issue of THE NEW FEDERALIST. Here's an excerpt from a feature story by Umberto Pascali on the Balkans, [quoting:] (See map on Pg. 72.)

When on July 11, 1,500 bloodthirsty Greater Serbian gangsters broke into the United Nations-protected "safe haven" of Srebrenica in eastern Bosnia, the thin line of about 70 U.N. Protection Forces [UNPROFOR] of the Dutch Battalion quietly withdrew. Then, the Final Solution began for the 44,000 civilians who had been trapped inside the city for the last three years. Burning, killing, and raping of girls, as young as 11 years old, went on for a long time. Many reports confirm the re-creation of the infamous rape camps. The males—as young as six years old—were separated from the women and younger children, and forced, at gunpoint, onto trucks. Many just disappeared. Others were herded into concentration camps, where they can be visited by no one, including the Red Cross.

Though ready to fight, the Bosnians of Srebrenica, had been deprived by the U.N. forces of the few weapons they had, in exchange for "protection". Many thousands of people, desperate and hoping against hope, followed the U.N. soldiers who locked themselves in their barracks in the nearby village of Potocari. In vain! Nobody protected them. Then, the Chetniks arrived.

Three years before, the U.N. under the leadership of Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, concocted the scheme of the "safe havens". The Bosnians, many of them refugees from Serbian aggression, already hit by an illegal U.N.-imposed arms embargo, were concentrated in the reservations-style "safe havens", and, in exchange for U.N. "protection", disarmed. [Listen up, folks; this is the plan for us, too!] The Bosnian civilians were kept terrorized, starving, without adequate medicine, energy, and water. The Chetniks kept up their aggression—harrasing and turning back supply convoys, shelling, bombing, and implementing their "ethnic cleansing". The U.N. did nothing except to intervene to help the Serbs when the Croats or the Bosnians were gaining ground. [The U.N. has been using the same MO throughout its 50-year history.]

Why is the U.N.-British Empire so determined to establish Greater Serbia? Greater Serbia is only a first step toward a broadening of the war in the middle of Europe. If Karadzic wins the war will spread next to Kosovo, Macedonia, Hungary, and Greece, and the world will be put on a short fuse for World War III. The British oligarches are ready to risk (or trigger) a new world war, in order not to lose their control.... Serbia has been used by the British as the "watchdog of the Balkans" for at least a century. At the beginning of the century, a coalition of pro-development forces in Germany, France, Turkey, the Middle East and elsewhere launched an ambitious plan to construct a railway from Berlin to Bagdad. It was an approach diametrically opposed to the "British system". Only a small area along the pathway of this impressive project was controlled by Britain: Serbia. And the Greater Serbians were activated to derail it.

On June 28, 1914, two terrorists, Gavrilo Princip and Vaso Cubrilovic, members of a secret organization, the Black Hand or Young Bosnia, set up by British intelligence, killed in Sarajevo the heir to the Austrian throne, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his pregnant wife. The act signaled the beginning of World War I. The British Empire, like a vampire, gained new life on the blood of a whole generation. At the end of the war, in 1918, it was the Versailles treaty that rewarded the Greater Serbians, by giving them Croatia, Bosnia, Macedonia, and Slovenia—a small empire later called Yugoslavia.

TAVISTOCK PSYCHIATRISTS BEHIND THE RAPE OF BOSNIA

This article by Joseph Brewda appeared in the same issue of THE NEW FEDERALIST, [quoting:]

The mass media are running daily reports of the atrocities being committed by Serbians in Bosnia. What is the reason for such behavior? Is there some military-tactical purpose for the rape-camps, the mass murder of civilians, and other incidents which evoke Nazi-era war crimes? Or are they, as British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd claims, natural outbreaks of bestiality which are “nothing new” in the history of war? EIR [The Executive Intelligence Review magazine, in which this article first appeared in 1993] conducted its own investigation of these events and determined that the atrocities are being run top-down by psychiatrists trained by the London Tavistock Institute... Although media accounts suppress this fact, the leadership of the Chetnik forces operating in Bosnia and Croatia, and those in Serbia, are psychiatrists, psychologists, and sociologists:

* Dr. Radovan Karadzic, the leader of the Chetniks in Bosnia, who oversees the rape camps, is a psychiatrist who specializes in “group therapy” and depression.

* Dr. Jovan Rascovic, the leader of the Chetniks in Croatia until his recent death, was one of former Yugoslavia’s leading psychiatric theoreticians, an expert on “narcissism”.

* Dr. Mihailo Markovic, the chief ideologist of the ruling Serbian party, who justifies the genocide, is a sociologist and historian of philosophy, specializing in Freudian psychology.

...an enthusiastic former Tavistock official told EIR: “At this point, we no longer think we have anxiety about the danger of a nuclear war, so a lot of other anxieties are coming to the fore, especially anxieties about the small planet we live in. We fear there is not enough air, not enough fuel. It’s a kind of Malthusian thing, I would call it. So the feeling that is developing [is BEING developed], is that to kill off the population is not a bad thing. So, while with the thinking part of the mind, people are bothered by the brutality in Yugoslavia, with the animal-survival part of themselves, they may have other thoughts, actually welcoming the killing.” [So, the Tavistock rationale is: if we are reduced to survival mode, we will operate at a lower, easier-to-control set of standards.]

WHO PULLS THE STRINGS?

An interesting comment from another Larouche publication, this comes from the June 2 issue of EIR,

Attorney General Janet Reno has become a convenient target for a lot of people who recognize that something is badly wrong with the U.S. Department of Justice. It's about time that these folks recognize that every time they rant and rave about "that woman" [or "Butch"?], they are actually following a British game plan to destabilize the U.S. Government. [True enough. This applies as well to Clinton and other slimy puppets from the underworld. This advice could well be taken by EIR itself, with regard to its rantings against Newt and the "Republican Right". It's always best to look at the bigger picture: the rival factions of puppeteers who manipulate left wing/right wing, Democrats/Republicans, and other conflictual situations.]

HYMN AND HER

From the July 29 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

OAKLAND, Calif.—Hark! The herald angels still sing. But no longer is it to the newborn King. Instead, it's "Glory to the Christ-child they bring." "Kings" have been edited out of the new United Church of Christ hymnal, which recently debuted in Oakland at the 1.5 million-member Protestant denomination's annual five-day meeting.

"Strong men and maidens meek" have bitten the dust, replaced by "strong souls and spirits meek". "Man" is gone too, as a word to represent humanity; "dark" is gone for lack of spirituality. "God, the Fathers" are still around, but now they are balanced with an equal number of "God, the Mothers".

In the first rewrite of the 6,200-parish denomination's hymnal in 40 years, inclusiveness was the theme, even if at times it made an awkward mouthful of some traditional lyrics. The committee began working with 10,000 hymns in 1989, finally narrowing the new hymnal down to 617 acceptable [to whom?] ones. "It is inclusive with regard to gender language, with regard to cultural language, with regard to handicapped language," said the Rev. Ansley Coe Throckmorton of Cleveland, who worked on the edition.

Not to offend anyone, or to equate a disability with a spiritual lack, the panel consulted blind church members to make sure that, in "Amazing Grace", "I once...was blind, but now I see" wasn't offensive. It wasn't. [Whew. These hymns, like the Bible, are continually "revised" to make them "easier" for mankind to tolerate and "understand". But as they become more palatable to peoplekind, they reflect less and less of God.]

PHILIP MORRIS' RESEARCH

From the July 25 issue of JOHNSON CITY PRESS, [quoting:]

Secret research documents show Philip Morris tracked hyperactive third-graders as potential future smokers and gave electric shocks to college students to see if it would make them smoke more, a congressman charged Monday. One company report concluded smokers crave nicotine more than food, he said. Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., unveiled stacks of documents from the world's largest tobacco company on the House floor, contending they illustrated unethical and possible illegal research into nicotine.

LAW CAREER NO BED OF ROSES

From the July 2 issue of the DENVER POST, [quoting:]
He earns $150,000 a year at a prestigious law firm, owns a home in an upscale neighborhood and drives a sports car. But the 31-year-old Los Angeles defense lawyer is so unhappy that he is considering chucking his law career and doing something else. “I look around this firm and see so many people making very good money and being so miserable,” he said.

Disenchantment with the legal life is so pervasive among lawyers that many were not surprised when Christopher Darden recently questioned whether he wanted to try another case after the high-pressure O.J. Simpson murder trial. Although Darden may simply be frustrated by the difficulty of prosecuting a celebrated, well-heeled and popular defendant, survey after survey has found that a growing percentage of lawyers despise their jobs. They tend to be more troubled than other professionals by severe depression and drug and alcohol abuse, studies have found. Eleven percent of lawyers polled in North Carolina in 1991 admitted they consider taking their lives at least once a month. In California, a quarter of attorneys are on inactive status with the State Bar and no longer pay dues, up from 10 percent in 1980.

Many lawyers trace their disillusionment to the practice of law itself. Pressure to make money and win big cases has transformed the legal culture, many lawyers say, turning the profession into more of a sink-or-swim business. For some, the art of wooing clients has become more valued than crafting effective legal arguments. “It’s a war out there,” a Los Angeles entertainment lawyer said matter-of-factly. [It sounds like a bit of “what goes around comes around” to me!]

BAR ASSOCIATION HARASSES PARALEGALS

Gerald Shields wrote this article for the August 2 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

The Florida Bar Association is cracking down on what it calls a proliferation of people practicing law without a license; [i.e., without THEIR approval and control; like the American Medical Association, this is a union, plain and simple, designed to regulate its members and keep prices high and competition out]. The lawyer group has opened 300 new unlicensed practice cases over the last six months after adding investigators in Orlando, Tampa, and Miami. Critics of the crackdown say the increasing number of consumers seeking help from legal technicians, paralegals or handling cases on their own highlights a more disturbing trend: a rise in the number of state residents unable to afford an attorney. [Ha! I don’t know ANYONE who can afford a lawyer, based on the incompetent, scam-ridden, self-serving legal eagles I have seen in action (with apologies to those who do not fit this mold—surely you are out there somewhere).]

From 1985 to 1992, nonlawyer businesses handling legal services in the United States rose from 237 to 6,000 according to a Florida Bar survey. That number is likely to reach 20,000 by the end of this decade. The bar licenses and regulates 43,000 lawyers throughout the state.

OFFICIALS ALLOWED SPREAD OF HIV BLOOD

Delthia Ricks wrote this article for the July 14 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

Shoddy leadership from the public health-care elite helped lead to HIV contamination of the U.S. blood supply in the 1980s even though scientists knew AIDS was caused by a blood-borne pathogen, a report said. A retrospective study of the blood supply from 1982 to 1986 revealed Thursday that not only could hemophiliacs have been spared, but their lifesaving blood products probably could have been kept HIV-free through a simple technique that dated back to the 1940s. The blood supply now is considered safe [I'll pass, thank you], and tests for HIV and other lethal viruses are routinely performed, health officials say. [Note that they didn't say "effective tests".] Still, most of the nation's 16,000 hemophiliacs and 12,000 blood-transfusion patients were infected with the deadly virus a decade ago when they were infused with AIDS-tainted blood or blood products.

WIDESPREAD CONTAMINATION OF BLOOD POSSIBLE

This article by Moira Welsh comes from the July 17 issue of THE TORONTO STAR, [quoting:]

The contamination of the Canadian Red Cross Society blood supply by a fatal brain disease is probably far more widespread than anyone imagined, a hematologist warned yesterday. Dr. Nathan Kobrinsky, who testified recently at the Krever blood inquiry, said yesterday that Friday's Canadian recall of blood and two similar recalls in the U.S. last fall "probably represent the tip of the iceberg in terms of the blood pool."

So little is known about Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, which causes dementia and death within a year after symptoms appear, that it is impossible for experts to say whether it can be transmitted through blood transfusions. And that makes the potential of contamination truly frightening, Kobrinsky said.

The massive blood recall came after officials were notified last Wednesday that a Vancouver man with the disease had donated blood six weeks earlier, which would have been mixed with the blood of others during the making of blood supplies. It is so widespread that transplant, surgery, and hemophiliacs could face blood shortages by next week if enough new blood supplies can't be found in Europe and the United States.

GULF WAR SYNDROME

ALARMING ESCALATION OF DEATHS & ILLNESS

PART I: GOVERNMENT COVER-UP CONTINUES

by Rick Martin 8/18/95

The phrase “Gulf War Syndrome” rings a bell with most people, but that’s about all. Images of sick vets in a V.A. hospital come to mind. But most people also believe what they are being told by the mainstream media, which frankly isn’t much.

The reality is that the death toll for the Gulf War Syndrome is mounting, and the numbers of ill are increasing at an alarming ratio when compared to the numbers of those who served in the Gulf War.

To say that the American people have been lied to about this illness is not too strong a statement to proclaim bitterly.

This is a complex subject, as you can easily imagine, and one which can not be told in one small sound-bite. We have, therefore, elected to break up this story into a series which will begin with an immediately relevant interview with a very brave and dedicated woman, Joyce Riley. Jeff Rense, interviewer with The End of the Line radio program, has been kind enough to allow us to use his interview verbatim.

Later in this series we will explore in greater detail the specifics of this complex and ever-changing situation, including input from the insiders and real experts in the field who face this illness close up.

Jeff: Tonight we’re going to dig into an explosion waiting to happen. It’s commonly known as the Gulf War Syndrome. Varying afflictions that have struck down American military personnel who served in Operation Desert Storm back in 1990. This program will shock you and leave you angry, and maybe wondering if the entire world has gone mad. To bring us this information will be two guests, Joyce Riley and Peter Kawaja. We’ll be talking to Joyce Riley in hour number one.

Joyce is a graduate of the University of Kansas, a registered nurse and flew active duty air-evacuation missions during Operation Desert Storm for over six months in 1990 and during that time saw many things which left her more than concerned. Joyce is now the spokesman for the Gulf War Veterans Association. Things began to become extremely suspicious for Joyce about a year or so ago, and we’ll get details from her now.

Welcome, Joyce, to The End of the Line.

Joyce: Thank you so much. I appreciate it, Jeff.

Jeff: You're welcome and tell me how you first got involved flying air-evac in Desert Storm.

Joyce: Well, I had been in the reserves prior to Desert Storm and when the war broke out and there was a need for flight nurses—they needed qualified flight nurses—and since I had been qualified at one point, it would not take me very much to get back to that position again. So, I volunteered to go back to Kelly Air Force Base, 32nd Air-evac Squadron in San Antonio, where I requalified and then got ready to go to Saudi. I then just flew the active duty missions on the part of the Air Force to different countries to bring the soldiers back and to air-evac American military people.

Jeff: What kinds of injuries were you seeing most commonly among the troops and personnel brought back?

Joyce: Most of the things that we were seeing were accidents that had occurred at the time. There were not many war casualties that I can remember seeing at that point. And if there were, most of them were on a tertiary sort of air-evac back—I mean, they weren't coming directly back from Saudi. They may have been treated in Germany before, so whatever injuries they had, they were doing fairly well. But we were just seeing mostly the results of accidents that occurred over there.

Jeff: How many personnel served in Operation Desert Storm? It was about a hundred-day war and there were hundreds of thousands and, I guess, what, three hundred thousand?

Joyce: Well, between 1991 and 1993, when they sent more troops back, there were close to one million who served in Operation Desert Storm, which is an incredible number given the fact of the purpose why we were over there. But nearly a million veterans went over there.

Jeff: That really is remarkable. So, the Gulf War Veterans Association, again, in its, as you told me earlier, in its formative stages has, potentially, a million members.

Joyce: That is correct, yes. Plus all the supporters who care about America and care about their veterans.

Jeff: Sure. Now, what happened, Joyce, to get you thinking that there was something not quite right with what was happening to our vets after they came back?

Joyce: An incredible number of them were sick, very early on they were sick and they were told that it was a psychiatric problem or they just didn't want to work or they were just trying to get out of something. It was amazing how many of them came back feeling very ill at first. This kind of resolved a little bit, and then the stories started coming out that these people were really malingerers and it was psychiatric problems and the V.A. started doing a tremendous cover-up of the issues. So, there wasn't a lot said about it at that time. Now, I had my own personal reasons for believing that I was infected by it, which I really don't want to go into at this point—which is my own validation of this. But, there were a number of problems that occurred, with all of them different; it seems like everybody had some type of problem. And because they were somatic or seemed to be just a symptom, such as sore joints, or muscle aches or muscle twitches, nobody put it together as being a tincture. It was just simply, the doctor was treating a symptom. And then the individuals started getting very sick early on about six or nine months after returning. Many of them developed very strange cancers, and we're talking about guys who have been a 25 or 27-year-old paramedic or a 25-year-old paratrooper who have been in an absolute excellent state of health. Several of the Special Forces people who had been in very good health were now coming down with illnesses.

Jeff: What type of cancers?

Joyce: Well, they would have strange abdominal—strange abdominal cancers, pancreatic cancers, lymphomas—strange cancers that you would not expect to see in a young man.

Jeff: Utterly out of context.

Joyce: Absolutely. In fact, I got a phone call just the other day from a young man who said that he was 24-years old and he had been given one week left to live. He was 20 when he went over to Desert Storm and that he had developed a strange abdominal-type cancer that his doctor said could have never occurred naturally. And this young man, unfortunately, of course has been—these people are not eligible for military care any longer. Most of the reservists, who are a big part of the people who went over there, especially in medical personnel, do not have any access to the V.A. which really doesn't make any difference because the V.A. is really not treating them at this point. They are just simply assigning them a psychiatric illness and then sending them away.

Jeff: You mentioned earlier that the V.A. was doing its best to obscure this disease syndrome as it began to spread. Do you have any direct evidence of disinformation tactics or is this just a feeling that you have?

Joyce: Oh no, we have definite information on it because some of the medical records that we were able to obtain will show that these individuals had definite physical problems—I mean, serious neurological problems. In fact, one person I know who is in a wheel-chair and on oxygen, was given five psychiatric diagnoses. Well, you know, this gets to be a little bit hard to accept. Most of these people who have these bad rashes, which is what many of the Desert Stormers have, are much thicker than one would think. I mean, it's not just a rash but there was no look into what was really the problem.

Jeff: Beside cancer and rashes, what other things are we seeing now?

Joyce: Chronic Fatigue Syndrome was one of the biggest things and that was one of the most immediate problems that they had. Chronic fatigue, not just they're tired but that they can't function, they can't think; they have memory loss, hearing loss, loss of eyesight. It was not just a Chronic Fatigue Syndrome. These people, they were given either a non-diagnosis or simply told there was absolutely nothing wrong with them and sent away to where—in fact, one Marine called me the other day and said that he had been discharged from the Marines and given a dishonorable discharge because they said he just didn't want to work. He said, "I was so sick when I got back from Saudi and now my entire family is sick." And he said, "I'm so glad you're doing what you're doing because now I know I wasn't crazy and because now I don't have to live with the fact that I was a bad Marine."

Jeff: You just said something that opens a Pandora's Box when you said the man's entire family is sick—that certainly leads to an obvious question. Is it a communicable syndrome we're talking about here?

Joyce: Unfortunately, it is. There are families, entire families who have gotten sick and an interesting counterpart to this is that it is transmissible to animals too.

Jeff: It cross the species barrier, does it?

Joyce: It does, yes. I'm not as clear about animals back to people, although I have heard stories about that but I don't have any proof of that. But I do know that Dr. Nicholson who is the person who isolated the first germ-warfare bacteria—when his step-daughter came back from Iraq, she had been doing deep insurgence in the 101st Airborne—their family got sick, plus the cat got sick. So, being a Ph.D. researcher in cell biology he decided that if anybody can figure this out, he can. The man has written over 400 papers on cancer; he's brilliant. He's from the Anderson Cancer Center; he's a Nobel Prize nominee. He tested the blood of everyone in the family and they were all positive for this mycoplasma that is a germ-warfare agent.

Jeff: You mentioned also, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (CFS) which is known by many people to be America's unknown plague. Pretty easy to write CFS on the diagnosis and send somebody home and say, "Good luck. We don't know what it is but come back in six months." I guess that's how they handled a lot of this in the beginning, didn't they?

Joyce: Absolutely. And the fact that they gave psychiatric diagnoses really bothers me for a lot of reasons. This has been a way to write it off. And, in fact, there were very, very sick people and I will tell you this and this was just confirmed by Channel #11 in Houston to me, is that they are only allowing three Desert Stormers in that great big huge V.A. hospital in Houston right now, because it might look like they have a problem if they admitted more. So, there's a six-month waiting list. These men and women are absolutely being turned out on the streets. They have lost everything. They are so sick they cannot work. And they are being absolutely devastated by the government that sent them over there. And the sad part is, they will say to me, "I was prepared and I was willing to go over and die for my country. I had no idea I would be dying on my own soil."

Jeff: Alright, Joyce, that's pretty heavy stuff to start this first segment with. We'll continue and as we do, let's talk about this transmissibility factor. One question, before we proceed, how many to this date, in your opinion, your testament, have been afflicted?

Joyce: Well, the figure that we have at this point is that 200,000 of them are actively sick right now. 200,000 being primarily the Desert Stormers who are sick. That does include their families. That is our gross estimate of people in the United States who are sick with something related to Gulf War Illness. Approximately 7,000 have already died. Now, when you talk to the V.A. they'll give you several different figures ranging from 2,500 to about 6,400 who have died since returning from Desert Storm. But, we know it probably to be over 7,000 people at this point.

Jeff: That's a huge figure.

Joyce: It's incredible for that age group, yes.

Jeff: The fact that this disorder, this illness, this microbe is being transmitted from people to animals is almost unprecedented. We've done many shows on disease, on AIDS, HIV communicability and so forth, and to find an organism that can be transmitted to animals is truly frightening.

Joyce: It is. And I don't know if your people understand. You have, obviously, some incredible programs on, from seeing your material on this station at The End of the Line. But this is probably truly the biggest story of the 20th Century. It involves so many different aspects of things that are just abhorrent to the American public. This microbe that I just mentioned, Mycoplasma incognitus, is only, unfortunately, one of the probably ten to fifteen different microbes or the different types of germ warfare that was utilized. So, we've only identified one of them and we don't know what the other ones are doing.

Jeff: Who used the microbes, who used the biological warfare weapons, in your opinion?

Joyce: I'm going to speak to the issue of what Saddam Hussein did and I want you to talk to Peter about the rest of it. But, I would tell you, it was here in the United States—made here in the United States. It was made in the middle to late 1980s, locally in Houston and in Boca Raton, Florida. After that point it was then shipped through a Houston intermediary to Saddam Hussein. Now, this is when we were essentially on good terms with Saddam Hussein; however, there is a lot of question about whether we continued on good terms with him and what really transpired at this time. But the biologicals and the germ warfare were then transferred to Saddam Hussein, so we had full knowledge going into the war of what he had and what we were sending our troops into.

Jeff: You know, we're left with—and we'll talk with Peter about that in much more detail later, but we're left with the feeling or the residual that I have in my mind is that there really wasn't anything used against American troops by Hussein; it was relatively a clean war. People were wondering why he didn't use all of these weapons that he had. The press would carry reports that, "Well, they were all taken out in preemptive airstrikes", and so forth. So this is really a story that nobody knows about, I think, in the mainstream.

Joyce: Well, I'll tell you who knows about it. It is the individuals who shipped this stuff via the United States Government—the American military, the Customs people. I've had people from Customs call me and say, "I transported it. I know." I've had a pilot call me who said, "I know. It was on my plane. I delivered it." There is no question. The people who know about this are the American military. The people who do not know about it are the American public who have been deluded into the idea that he didn't do anything, Saddam Hussein didn't shoot up anything. Well the main point of proof to this is that if you talk to the Desert Stormers, they will tell you how they got really sick after that cloud of stuff came down. Well, what happened was, when the Skud, B and Frog missiles came over they were intercepted, as we said, by our state-of-the-art technology: the Patriot Missiles that were able to hit them at 200 feet in the air. The only problem is, it rained down germ warfare on our people.

Jeff: That's another story, too, the Patriot Missile. I've read conflicting reports about the accuracy of that one.

Joyce: That's right. And you know, it's interesting because now the guys are coming forward and saying, “Man, you know, I always thought those Patriot Missiles were so good. They were able to just catch it right away.” And, in reality, they were being subjected to it. And I’ve talked to a lot of the nurses, and these are the people who are getting sick now. These people are very sick. They either received it from the guys over there or got it directly, but now they are very, very ill.

Jeff: Joyce, you do your own radio show and you’re trying to get the word out on this. You have, I guess, for the past year been receiving a lot of inside information, have you not?

Joyce: That’s correct.

Jeff: The toughest part would be though, I would assume, getting the calls from the young men who are dying. That has got to be just tearing you up?

Joyce: Oh, it’s awful. I’ll tell you, that is one reason why I decided to go forward with American Gulf War Veterans Association, because I can no longer tolerate the idea that nothing is being done for these people. Literally, nothing is being done, including the nurses who are so incredibly ill. We have a real problem in that the government has been so precise in the manner in which they have covered this up and gotten the American public to think that these people are all crazy, that there is no resource for them. In fact, the V.A. has just recently installed an “incident line” where if you’ve heard of anything or you have any information, you call us and we’ll get to the bottom of it. Well, what they are wanting to know is, what do you know out there? What evidence do you have? It breaks my heart when these guys call and they’re so sick. One lady called me in tears and said, “My husband came back from Desert Storm. He was sick within six months and in a wheel chair” and now their entire family—including their child—they’re in their twenties and are in wheel chairs. This is not coincidence.

Jeff: We’re not seeing any of this in the mainstream media.

Joyce: No, and it has to worry people. It should scare the living daylights out of people to think that this can go on, it can be this pervasive, and nobody knows about it.

Jeff: We have some parallels with HIV infection, too, I’m told that this particular organism, or one of them—you said there are ten or fifteen of them out there—appear to be retroviral in nature. And that would go right along with the theory, which is, in many people’s minds, much more than a theory, that these organisms are easily manufactured and have been made for the past fifteen years.

Joyce: That’s correct. We have a list that was shipped to the Iraqi Atomic Energy Commission of the items of germ warfare. So, we had full knowledge of what they had. Now, Peter will tell you a little bit more about how they tried to counteract that, the U.S. military tried to counteract it with certain pills and immunizations. But, the bottom line is, we made it here and we sold it to them with full knowledge and we sent our troops into harm’s way and that ought to outrage every American.

Jeff: Did any of the troops tell you that they were warned at all about this appropriately and given proper knowledge of the potential danger?

Joyce: Absolutely not, nobody was. In fact, they were into areas where they had no knowledge of what was going on. They were given medications; they didn't know what they were. You were not allowed to know what you got. I know, I got shots before we were supposed to ship out, I had shots, and they wouldn't even tell us what we got. And we had to get eight or nine at a time. Everybody was incredibly sick afterwards. There is a pill called the predostigmine bromide pill that lots of people were given, a PD pill and that was to counteract, supposedly, some of the germ warfare, and people became violently ill from that. So, it is not—the problem is, there are so many unknowns right now. We don't know what immunizations we got. We don't know what pills we took. We don't know what we were subjected to.

Jeff: And we really don't have the right to know, do we? [sarcastically]

Joyce: Well, absolutely not. We sure don't. It is killing people, just killing people.

Jeff: Do you have any knowledge that the vaccines themselves and other agents given to the troops, potentially, are at the bottom of some of the illnesses of maybe these 200,000 people who are now ailing?

Joyce: All I can say, at this point, is yes. And that is probably one of the things that has most people concerned, because the people who didn't even go over there, that didn't even get close to anybody coming back from over there, have the disease also.

Jeff: What types of treatments are being offered, when they are being offered at all, for these illnesses?

Joyce: Given the fact that only one—well, I must say that a second one was just isolated but I don't know the antidote to it. The first one that was isolated by Dr. Nicholson was Mycoplasma incognitus, which has the HIV envelope to it. This bacteria, it's between the size of a virus and a bacteria and it burrows very, very deep into the cell. Now, let me just say that one of the reasons that people are having such a problem physically from this is that when the mycoplasma buries deep into the cell and comes back out again, it brings a piece of the cell with it and transfers that to a separate area—such as, synovial cell in the joint. It brings that out and goes to another area with that cell, and then they develop an artificial form of arthritis that is very debilitating. The same with Grave's Disease. You may remember a very famous president who ended up with Grave's Disease. His wife and his dog were sick at the same time.

Jeff: Very interesting.

Joyce: Yes, and Grave's Disease is one of the problems associated with the Mycoplasma. If it settles in the heart, then you get a real bad enlargement of the heart and even some of the diagnoses of some of the guys who have died have been, the doctors simply said, "Their heart exploded." And that can be because of the Mycoplasma. Now, the antidote to that, the only antidote that we have to this ONE germ warfare—and I do want to say that it is not a cure—is a tetracycline antibiotic called Doxycycline. Doxycycline is, well, what many of the Desert Stormers are being given now. I am not physician. I am not practicing medicine. I am simply telling you that in a February 22, 1995 JAMA, Journal of the American Medical Association article, it will tell you about Desert Storm and Doxycycline. It recommends 100 milligrams in the morning and 100 milligrams at night for maybe 10-14 days, and may need up to five or six different courses. Now, that article also recommends the use of Sipro [sp?] which is an antibiotic for those who cannot take a tetracycline. It is not a cure but it certainly has helped, given the fact that 1/2 to 2/3 of all of the returning Desert Stormers are positive for Mycoplasma incognitus.

Jeff: Wow. Who is collating figures at this point, you? 7,000 dead—you trying to keep track of it?

Joyce: Well, I am not the one doing those figures. I will tell you that the federal government has not allowed any money into the research of Desert Storm illness, other than to whitewash that they are doing themselves. They have not given a cent to Dr. Nicholson at M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. He is doing his own research. I am doing everything at my own expense. Everybody is having to do this on their own shoestring and they are testing, by the way, free, any Desert Stormer for Mycoplasma. And they are doing it; unfortunately it is costing a lot of money and there is no research money available. So, unfortunately, we're just having to do it with our own statistics and our own people as they approach us.

Jeff: Have you been to any Congressmen or women to talk about this?

Joyce: Yes.

Jeff: And the response?

Joyce: I personally handed this information to Tom DeLay. Tom DeLay is the third most powerful, the House Majority Whip, and I personally handed it to him. And I handed him a news release that said there was an antidote found to one of the germ warfare, and he said, "Is this true?"

And I said, "It certainly is. And I need to get you this information." And I said, "I need your response on this." And I said, "I'll be glad to provide you whatever you need."

No response. His office is not responding. I also called Bob Dornan's office in California. Now, Robert Dornan is where I was referred to who would be the person to start the Congressional investigation into this. And I wanted Congressional hearings to be held into Iraqgate. When I did that, I talked to two or three echelons in his office and hung up the phone. Two minutes later I got a phone call from NSA (National Security Agency), asking me the following questions: "I understand you were talking to Robert Dornan's office. Number one, how many sets of documents do you have? And, number two, who have you told about this incident?"

Jeff: Two minutes later?

Joyce: Yes. I said, "By the way, would like to know how many guys are sick? Or perhaps, maybe that we have an antidote to one of these?" No interest. Simply, how many sets of documents and who did you tell. When I told them that I had said it on my radio program, they immediately wanted to know what station and who was the station manager.

Jeff: Well, one would assume that you are being listened to tonight by some computer recording device somewhere then.

Joyce: Oh, I am sure. I am sure that my phone is probably tapped too, which makes no difference to me because there are so many Desert Stormers' lives that are at stake at this point that we must find out what that antidote is. We must find out what we were given. And we must be able to eliminate this before it spreads to the entire population. I am not one who wants to be an alarmist, but as a nurse I understand transmission and I understand communicability of diseases and I am extremely concerned that I am a voice in the wilderness, along with Peter Kawaja and along with Dr. Nicholson trying to tell the world, "We are concerned and you need to be concerned also."

Jeff: What type of mortality rate are we seeing then, if we've got 7,000 dead so far. Are we expecting this disease to take out, what, half of those who become infected? Do you have any clues on that?

Joyce: Well, the figure that I have heard that has been postulated by the people involved in this is half to two-thirds, yes.

Jeff: One-half to two-thirds.

Joyce: Yes. That it is more of a time-release form of illness because, you see, we're seeing the figures from the V.A. increasing dramatically now. They weren't increasing very fast at first but now they are starting to really increase. And so what we're seeing is, probably the devastation from this disease, the cancers they're effected with—not to even mention the kids, the kids who are being born deformed. There is a syndrome called Goldenhar in which babies are born with a missing limb or a missing eye.

Jeff: Yes, I've seen that.

Joyce: They have started a registry in Florida for just the babies who are born deformed from Gulf War veterans and the world doesn't know this and I want to know, why? And I want to know why the federal government is not taking action on this when these poor people are having to start a registry of their own for the deformed babies.

Jeff: Pretty easy to make a guess as to why some Congressman wouldn't want to take this on right now, wouldn't it, Joyce?

Joyce: Oh, I don't think either Democrats or Republican. Because, you see, it occurred under the Republican administration and the Democratic administration has full knowledge of this. And Peter can tell you about what he has sent to President Clinton in the way of evidence, but there is no excuse for this, absolutely. And it can hit anyone. I guess they feel they are protected, for whatever reason. Perhaps they have the silver bullet. And they are protected, for all we know.

Jeff: In many cases, the tag-line to these biological warfare weapons is, they aren't going to turn them loose unless they've got a way to stop them, somewhere.

Joyce: Absolutely.

Jeff: Joyce, we've got two organisms, you say, identified so far, maybe a dozen more. Dr. Nicholson is working on this. Anyone else?

Joyce: Not to my knowledge, no.

Jeff: So, he's it. And how do people get to Dr. Nicholson, as if he has time to take on more inquiries?

Joyce: He is located in Houston, Texas and he is at the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. Let me give the number there. Now, this is for people who either were in Desert Storm or families who may feel they are ill. This is not for general information. And let me give you that phone number. They can call there and they will then be told how to ship their blood down to Houston. That number is 713-792-7481. Any Desert Stormer or friend of a Desert Stormer or a significant family member can get their blood tested there, free of charge.

Jeff: And should they ask for Dr. Nicholson?

Joyce: They should ask for Jean, the secretary there, and she will give them the information on how to transmit the blood.

Jeff: Joyce, the people who came back, you know, you look back at this philosophically when somebody takes an oath and goes into the military, they vow to serve their country, to give their life. But do they, at that time, give up their human rights?

Joyce: Well, evidently, it looks that way. And that is why I want every Desert Stormer to get absolutely furious over this and to not just lay down and die and to not give it to their wife and children and then lay down and die, but to get furious against the federal government. The problem is, they still have this belief, most of them, and they are very patriotic, just as I, that my country wouldn't have done this to me. And it hurts so bad to believe that.

If I could just refer back to what your caller said. He really is on target. Number one, Michael Fumento wrote the worst piece of journalism I have ever seen in my life. And I think that man ought to be held accountable for what he wrote in the SPECTATOR because that article will kill people. That is so sad to think that anyone could have been so brazen to have spoken out and said things that are so incredibly wrong. I would never take the SPECTATOR again for that reason. Dr. Hyman [sp?] is a very, very well-known man. He is doing a lot of research in this area. I'm glad he responded to this. I have heard that he's been under tremendous political pressure against working on the Desert Storm Syndrome. I hope he still is. He is a very credible physician. And most of the people involved in this have been politically assassinated and have stopped working in the area. There are some people who are, but I don't happen to be aware of them right now. But yes, Dr. Hyman is very credible.

Jeff: It is very easy to shut somebody up. I know that the story that you may have heard about, maybe not, Dr. Jean Claude Sherman of the Pasteur Institute of Paris where the AIDS virus, HIV was discovered, went to Africa and did a lot of research on insects and, essentially, tested every insect in Africa that was known to interact and bite humans. And in every single species, at one point or another, he found at least the DNA of HIV. Well, he went back to Paris and began to publish his findings. In fact, in about 30 percent of the insects tested, he found live HIV. When he tried to print and publish this data, he began to receive death threats.

Joyce: I want everybody out there to know that we are not going to stop. There is nothing that will make me stop at this point. And, I did an open letter to President Bush on my radio program and I will tell you, in Houston is not the place to be doing this because the people involved in this live there in Houston. Number one, and Peter will tell you more about that, who is involved, the family who did the transfer to Saddam Hussein, as well as Bush and Baker being involved in the Houston area. This is not a really good place for me to be speaking out on this subject, and so I did an open letter to him and I said, "If anyone is silenced over this, it will only make us stronger. So do not think that you can take us out or silence us and we will stop in this, because the information is in the underground and it will not be stopped at this point. And, hopefully, we will get a million Desert Stormers together who are going to say, "We want a reckoning and we want criminal charges against those involved!" That is why we started the American Gulf War Veterans Association. Number one, for research and treatment, since nobody else cares about our Desert Stormers; and, number two, so that we can bring criminal charges where they are due.

Jeff: Do you remember, Joyce, how Bush and the others painted Saddam Hussein to be the new Hitler?

Joyce: We found out that there were a lot of things in the war that were not true. For instance, they used a public relations firm Hill and Knowlton to do the PR. They've taken 5.65 million dollars to make Saddam Hussein look bad. Do you remember the stories about the babies taken out of the incubators?

Jeff: Oh sure, that was discredited pretty thoroughly.

Joyce: Absolutely, but yet Congress believed it and they appropriate funds.

Jeff: And probably 8 out of 10 Americans, if they would even remember it, would say that it was true.

Joyce: That's right. And they sent the AWACs over there and they funded them. And that is the problem, that this is nothing but a PR war and it was not started for any reason other than a private agenda. And, unfortunately, many, many people have sacrificed their lives and the lives of their family members for it.

Jeff: And most of those many people were Iraqis, maybe 400 or 500,000 who were killed—I'm not sure of the number, nobody will ever know the number but it certainly was a lot. And now we have, maybe 200,000 sick here, 7,000 dead, so the casualty count continues to mount.

Joyce: We haven't even talked about the ones who are sick overseas. For instance, there are 1 million Iraqis who are sick right now, and supposedly, from the figures I have heard, 500,000—and that comes out of Iraq—have died already. The French have already treated their troops. U.K. is treating theirs. And, Israel has a real big problem because the SKUDs went into Israel also.

Jeff: You're talking 500,000 Iraqi civilians who have died since the war, and add that to the 400-600,000 people who died during the war, you've got a million dead right there.

Joyce: Absolutely. And, these people can all die and go off because the death certificate doesn't say, Gulf War Syndrome. It says lymphoma or it says pancreatic cancer, so nobody counts it.

Jeff: Right. Let me talk just a little more politically about this war. I'm going to ask you the pat question,

“Why was this war fought?”

Joyce: I think it was a personal agenda of George Bush. I don't think there was any indication for us to go into Kuwait. I think it is a political war in which he told Saddam Hussein, essentially, if you go into Kuwait that we will not stand up against you.

Jeff: Well, that was April Glaspie who made that statement. It's on the record.

Joyce: Exactly. And then it all happened. It has to do with arms sales. It has to do with germ warfare sales. It has to do with experimentation, and Peter is a lot more knowledgeable on that. And let me just say, to anybody who is listening, you are not going to believe what you are going to hear from Peter Kawaja when he tells his story because he has the most incredible story of this country. And he is probably one of this country's biggest heroes, only America doesn't know it yet. And they will be astounded with what he has to say.

I'll also tell you, what most of the people are experiencing is: they're getting the diagnosis of MS or Guillain Barré Syndrome. What happens is, you eventually get a neurological problem that gets so bad that it progresses to paralysis, and then death, if not treated. So, it is a very serious disease and they are ending up being labeled as M.S. I cannot tell you the numbers of people who have called me who have M.S. And they really don't, they have the Gulf War Syndrome.

Jeff: That's right, that's another broad-based term they label a lot of neurological disorders. Now, you feel without a doubt that this is virally induced, it's a neurological problem for the most part, and to this point in time, there is really not much that can be done about it.

Joyce: Until we find out the antidote. Until we find out what we are dealing with.

Jeff: Vectors of spreading this virus, in your opinion, are what?

Joyce: Well, I think it is being sexually transmitted. I think it is being transmitted via oral. It is suppose to be very contagious from an oral standpoint. In other words, you can just be next to someone. I had an American Legion chapter president or whatever they call it, call me the other day and he said, “I was visiting the Desert Stormers and after two weeks, I had the same illness they did just from visiting them at the V.A.”

Jeff: Sounds almost like a T.B. (tuberculosis) type of vectoring.

Joyce: Absolutely. And it is very scary yet.

Jeff: If that is the case, we're in big trouble even more so than even I realized as when we went into this program tonight. The HIV is not, at least to this point in time, acknowledged to be spread via the tuberculosis vector. It has to be a direct, body fluid to body fluid; however, there is more HIV in saliva than there is in the blood of someone who is infected. That particular virus, which is a retrovirus like the Mycoplasma virus, that can live outside the body for up to 21 days and be perfectly biologically active. However, what we are dealing with tonight, according to you, is something that is vectored through the air and is of the same sort of retroviral nature in that it is in an HIV envelope.

Joyce: Yes. And I would say to anybody who brought sand back from Desert Storm: don't open it—keep it sealed because the microbes, yes, are in that. And, there is a chance that they can be alive for 5 to 7 years. All their equipment needs to be sealed in a strong plastic bag. They do not need to have that out. A lot of people like to keep it around as souvenirs and that is not a good idea. So, for your own safety, put away your Desert Storm material and keep it separated and keep it tightly closed.

Jeff: Now, at this point in time you are founding an organization titled the Gulf War Veterans Association, you've given us a number, which is 713-587-5437, and you are asking again for?

Joyce: What we are wanting to know is, we want every Desert Stormer to be involved with our organization. We want your support. We want to be able to go to Washington and we want to be able to file charges against those who were responsible for making, experimenting with, distributing and selling germ warfare that was used.

They [the victims] are derelict at this point, essentially, they are destitute at this point and have no money. We want to raise money because we are going to provide our own research and treatment. We want to find out the cause to this. So, we also want, not only their names but where were they stationed? What did you see? What did they know? What did they have access to? But don't leave that on the phone message because I don't trust it. We want to know how to put all the parts to this puzzle together. With Peter Kawaja's evidence, we have most of everything we need but we would still like to know their stories. And we would like for them to write their stories to us so that we can get an affidavit, because a lot of the people, their lives are at stake who know a lot about this. And so, we want a signed affidavit from them which will then protect them, much more so.

Jeff: Incredible statistics, Joyce. To wrap them up again, statistically, 200,000 American veterans and family members now sick and ailing, 7,000 dead by your best reckoning. Of the 200,000 who are sick, you're projecting that possibly one-half to two-thirds will ultimately die of the organism that they came down with while serving in the Mid-East. A million sick in Iraq, with maybe 500,000 dead since the war adding to the 400-600,000 who the American Red Cross over there says died during combat. Most of those, of course, were civilians. Does that pretty well give us a synopsis?

Joyce: That's absolutely perfect. And I will top it off by saying that the V.A. says there is no such thing as a Gulf War Illness.

Jeff: And they're saying that in print.

Joyce: Yes, they are. I have that in print. It is incredible to me. I call them all the time and they give me such unbelievable stories. It is just incredulous to think that in America this has happened to us and we have been lied to over and over again to where we believe the lies. And our people are dying. And these people are dying quietly. And they are not rising up and this is why we are starting this organization and we will not be stopped.

THE VALLEY OF RADIANCE GRANDFATHER SPEAKS

Editor's note: The last installment of The Valley Of Radiance appeared in the 5/9/95 CONTACT. As per Commander Hatonn's request in the "Happy New Year!" writing on page 7, we are including for your reading pleasure this thought provoking writing from 1990 by that magnificent entity the Native Americans respectfully refer to as Grandfather. Where does Grandfather fit in the "spiritual hierarchy" ? As close to the top as anyone at our level of perception can imagine. — E.Y.

4/9/90 GRANDFATHER

TUNKASHILA (GRANDFATHER) SPEAKS

Grandfather to speak with you, Little Sparrow, that you might be in the remembering and the sharing of the long forgotten and remembered songs. I AM THE SONG and I am come to give you the weavings of your walk upon this place and speak of the migrations and the lessons of My Pale Son whom I send again. I come to speak of Tejas Shapé and the hill that sings as the wind and of My sacred hidden truths kept within the bosom of your Mother for your day of remembering.

The Great Cycle has come and this cycle of that which you call a year will see the return of the Sacred Driver Wheels of the Great Powers stored and put together to create the sign of infinity. This is the time of the Feathered Serpent Medicine Wheels and the Great Sleeper Dreamers. The first migration to the next world will begin, leaving behind on your planet remnants of enlightened humanity to join the many already on other planets throughout your universe.

This land known as Tejas Shapé, the Valley of Radiance, of abundant acorns, winds and clear sweet waters shall again come into the attention of My Bird Peoples for it has been caused to lie sleeping in protection of its ancient treasures.

It is the time of remembering of creation that you will again recognize the returning of the Bird Tribes. You are the Bird Tribes, the Solar Clan, the Children of the Stars. You are the source of all nativity, the way that spirit creativity comes into form in your world and in all higher worlds. Individuated. Intelligent. In spirit-being form, you are the tangible influence of an all-powerful Creator interfacing with a material world.

I honor the Shoshone and Piute who have not forgotten this place of Light and the other unnamed tribes who spirit the land. All of our relations are remembered.

The buffalo and the medicine wheel are honored as shared by the Sioux as the source of life survival and the skull of the buffalo for it represents the traditional and the spiritual life. The medicine wheel represents the sacred hoop and the four directions. Always joined within are the four eagle feathers which represent the social and spiritual significance of the number "four" in the Sioux life. Within the medicine wheel are the four virtues to always be remembered: Wisdom—"Woksape", Bravery—"Woohitika", Fortitude—

”Wowacintanka” and Generosity—”Wacantognaka”. Let it further be remembered that there is nothing greater—nothing lesser. Great lessons shall be in the coming forth from My Red Eagle, “Wamblisha”, who labels himself in this time of counting as Little Crow, for the time is soon for the great remembering.

Releasing your identities in the burst of joy that translates them into light, you flew outward from your source stars, riding waves of light across the sea of space until you reached your world. Each of you came from a different star. Yet your being is the source of every star. And in that Being you are one.

In the early days, your work was to catalyze biological activity in the oceans of the world and to oversee the growth and development of incarnate creatures. You did this both when clothed in physical form and when remaining luminous beings of pure light.

The forms you assumed early in those ages were of human shape, though lighter than the bodies you wear today. The drawback of materialization, however, was that it took much of your energy and attention to maintain the bodies in which you were dressed. Then was given unto you your spirits for it was necessary to create physical bodies that were self-sufficient, physical bodies that would have physical identities to care for them—egos, designed to work intimately with you, both in the maintenance of your human projections and in your continuing work of creation upon the physical plane.

We communicated this message unto you: “We are your spirits.” It was our presence here in this place that has called you up out of the soil. You were unfinished, incomplete; you are still not all that you can be. Some of what you now embody represents development in the right direction, but some of what you now think of as yourself is in actuality part of what one day will become “afterbirth”. The emphasis must now be realized that the value of your bodies are as dwelling places for the Great Spirit, your minds and hearts will remain open to communion with us. In time, that communion will flow into blending and both you and we will know ourselves as one upon the physical plane. In union, we will know completion.

One specific star of all the myriad stars you see twinkling in your night sky sends its spirit to Earth to incarnate in your individual human form. Your ego is designed to help that spirit to remain creatively incarnate here. Until you have bonded with the star consciousness, you remain unfinished.

Your race is soon to experience widespread awakenings, or as some will see it, a massive descent of beings from the stars.

We are the dreams of the Great Spirit, the true dreams, the clear dreams, the pure dreams, never tainted by fear, never touched by any motivation other than the motivation of love; and yet, we are the dreams, nevertheless. Thoughts, disincarnate beings drifting formless through a universe that has placed the highest value on form, living in the consciousness of a Creator whose desire is to take form in the very creature that will result from our bonding with you.

It is time to regain the rejected aspect of your spiritual intelligence—to reunite with your own wholeness and you must again come into contact with us in the absence of fear. The Great Day of Purification has begun, a short but essential cycle of division that will gather those who promote fear and violence and separate them from this season of the world as chaff is separated from wheat at threshing.

The timetable recorded in stone for the Awakened Ones is now recovered from moss, fern, lizard and leaf. In it are chiseled the dates of the Great Day of Purification, dates that now correspond to that which you call years—between recognized labels of 1987 to 2011.

You are the love of the Creator embodied in human form. Through the power of your love, you create. You are sent in the service of universal art to create beauty, balance and to enjoy all that has been created. The evocation of beauty and the description of truth: this is your purpose. The purpose of life! The very purpose of the universe.

In its own way, each species decides how it can best serve this purpose, once it understands it. The buffalo looks around and notices what is going on in prairie time and prairie space and designs a life to describe truth and to animate beauty as buffalos understand it. Whales describe time and space in their own unique forms, the caribou embody their understanding, and so on through the ages and expressions.

Throughout the galaxies, throughout the stars, all of the angelic races notice this purpose of life and decide how they can best serve. All form an idea of the wholeness of manifest life.

It is time now to join in your dancing circles and gather your tribes for the cycle is full. It is the time of the return of the Pale One who came forth to tell you of the times to come upon your lands. Tlazoma, Esecotal, Great Kate Zahl, Mahnt-Azoma, Quetzal Coatl, The Quiet Healer, The Mighty One Who Has No Image, Dawn-Light, Dawn-God, Chee Zoos—the one who went alone to his Father to look beyond the Third Cycle.

Let us look further: Wako-Naga, Wahkan of the Dakotah/Lakotah and even deeper into the Plumed Serpent of the Puans which is derived from the plume which symbolizes wind and the serpent which is the symbol of water.

What of Teohashati?—(Tehachapi, Tejas Shapé)—Teo means God and Ti means city. Meaning as with Teotihuacan, “The City of the God, Wahcan”.

There are sacred mounds in that placement where the crossroads centered for the trading people of peace, where the four corners of traveling meet. There is great history of the Black Tortoise Fire-Worshipping Turtle and Serpent people invading from the south. This place of Tejas Shapé is a sacred place where the dreams will again be danced into awakening.

Let us speak of the dancing of My Tribes. The foolish peer at the dancers and hear the music and chide and giggle for it is the most complicated music in creation. It makes a statement in half and quarter tones and complicated changing rhythms. The musicians are honored indeed.

The authentic dances are more kept to the sacred locations and every August the dancers gather in New Mexico. There are usually thirty-six tribes attending the festival from as far distant as the Dakotas. The Sioux are particularly colorful with their almost priceless ancient costumes of white beaded buckskin and the long eagle feather head-dress of the Full-Chief.

The dances are different than the ones in the typical pow-wow dances for the pow-wow dancers are usually imitating the victory dance after a war-party-return. The thanksgiving dances are beautiful and the other dances are prayers for rain, abundant crops, or prayers to the spirits of hunted animals before a hunt.

Then you must note the wondrous Katchinas, especially of the Hopi. The Katchinas are from outer space and visited the Pueblos in silver sky ships which landed on the nearby Francisco Peaks [Near Flagstaff, AZ] near the Hopi villages, bearing gifts and dancing for the people. The most graceful of all dances is the lovely Eagle Dance, while the hoop-dance, showing great skill on the part of the solo dancer, is usually a wedding dance.

The Navajo have a group dance with high-pitched chanting in half and quarter tones which echo unto the heavens. And there is a most amazing dance, the Navajo Fire-Dance. Then there is the Crow Dance, usually performed by children and is fun and delightful; but I could continue on and on for these are My blessed people and I begin to remember and ramble greatly.

I will speak of calendars and telling of time and then leave you for your ponderings. The time of attention is come and for the recognition of truth within My tribes.

Before the time of the Prophet called the Pale One, and used by him, was a method of time reckoning used from north-most North America to the south of South America and is centrally based on Venus. Sometimes its numbers are known only, and Venus referred to as “The Star Boys” or “Twin-Star God” showing a degeneration of ancient knowledge—it is this ancient truth which shall now come again.

Venus, being the second planet from the Sun, and Earth the third, swings around its internal orbit making thirteen revolutions to eight revolutions of the Earth. Thus among all Indian tribes the Earth-number is eight, and the number of the Morning and Evening Star (depending on time of year viewed) is thirteen. Eight thirteens then would bring the planets into their original position. This would be a full cycle, or one-hundred-and-four years. A half cycle would be fifty-two years. Upon this most American Indian reckoning is based. However, it is often checked by other reckoning. The Mayans have four inter-revolving calendars. They were well acquainted with the weight and measurement of the Earth, the swing of the Sun from Capricorn to Cancer and back, the Precession of the Equinoxes and the fact that your Sun is moving through space, carrying your family of planets along. They believed the Sun is circumnavigating a Central Fire located in the Heavens near the Pleiades which they called Mya. This is the same central sun called Aton, the One Light.

The ancient calendars have now ended, beloved children of My tribes. It is now in the closing time of your new counting, numbered year three. The ancient countings ended in the mid-time of August, in your year 1987. The time of the coming again of the Sacred Circle is at hand and it is the time to see the star people come out of the illusion of their two-legged form and into their actual Great Sleeper-Dreamer form.

Look up, My native children, unto the heavens and unto the Choo Ho Kan for you are descendants of the inhabitants of Pleiades. You of the Hopi and Navajo as well as others of My people count with a system based on a 260 day “Sacred Round”, or minor cycle, and a 365 day year, a major cycle which equaled a period between the midnight culminations of the Pleiades. Remember that any day calculated on these cycles repeats itself in 52 years—18,980 days. When the Pleiades are directly overhead at night then it is time to extinguish the nation's fires and rekindle from a sacred fire produced by your holy men. You can remember to count from the Hopi who light the new fire every 52 years.

Then remember the Creeks who came to Earth from the stars in spirit form to become flesh and blood. Remember the "green corn dance" where the medicine man takes seven ears of corn from seven fields of the seven clans to insure a healthy harvest.

Your ancient home is often called "the dancers" because of the legend of the dancing children, come forth through the Onondaga. The Navajo named the sparkling Suns the Dilyehe. The Iroquois believe the twinkling orbs represent seven young people who guard the holy seed.

The Hohokam, or those who vanished, returned to Pleiades and thus and so. These stars were the home of your ancestors, so hear Me well. It is time for the legends to awaken for you all have your sacred dances.

Enjoy the gathering together for the energies will sing in the winds as the Hosts of the Heavens bless again the Bird Tribes who are now returning to fulfill the great mission. The little Sun Eagle is now returned and the lotus is ready to open.

AHO!

THE NEWS DESK

by Phyllis Linn 8/18/95

MARINES AT ODDS WITH AMERICA

This feature article comes from the July 27 issue of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, [quoting:]

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C.—After just eight weeks at boot camp, Andrew Lee has come to love the Marines and despise civilians. “People outside military life are repulsive,” says Recruit Lee, the top member of Platoon 3086, as he cleans his M-16 rifle. “I think America could use a lot more military discipline.” [Nothing that a little Martial Law wouldn’t fix?] Parris Island routinely transforms the Beavis and Butt-heads of America into United States Marines. After 11 weeks here, recruits emerge self-disciplined, with a serious bearing. They are drug-free, physically fit and courteous to their elders. They have overcome deep differences of class and race and learned to live and work as a team.

But they do all that by becoming members of a military service that is pervaded with disdain for the society it protects. Like Recruit Lee, many of the young men in Platoon 3086 will leave Parris Island with a patriotism at odds with much of American culture. At home on post-graduation leave, they will feel estranged from old friends and society at large. [How convenient for the One World Puppetmasters, especially if these troops will be called upon to “crack down” on U.S. citizens under Martial Law.]

At McDonald’s, in amusement parks and bars, each returning Marine seems to experience a moment of private loathing for public America. For Pvt. Frank DeMarco, it occurs at a street fair in Bayonne, N.J. “It was crowded. Trash everywhere. People were drinking, getting into fights. No politeness whatsoever.” But, says the stocky, ever-smiling private, “I didn’t let it get to me. I just said, “This is the way civilian life is.”” His Bayonne buddy, Pvt. John Hall, half-jokingly calls civilians “a bunch of freaks”. Turning serious, he says, yes, he does feel contemptuous of American society. In Adelphi, Md., Pvt. Christopher Anderson...says he feels more allegiance to the Corps than to his country. “Defending my country? Well, it’s not my country,” he explains as he sips a beer in the darkness of a humid early summer night. “I may live in America, but the United States is so screwed up.” [Do you think this attitude is an ACCIDENT on the part of the military?]

NATURE DOCUMENTARIES: RAISING THE GORE RATIO

Violence and bloodshed are perfectly natural—at least that seems to be the message in this latest TV genre that includes Time-Life’s Predators of the Wild, whose TV ads are replete with roaring grizzlies and tigers shaking bloody corpses. The August 7 issue of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL reports, [quoting:]

“You are in a nightmare filled with monsters that bite and crawl and kill,” the narrator intones. “A nightmare more terrifying because it's real. Welcome to nature's dark side..." The new genre really took off last year when Discovery, which is 49%-owned by Tele-Communications Inc., entered the fray.... Soon, Discovery was airing some of the most graphic scenes on TV. In one show, two wild dogs, after chasing and killing a baby gazelle, literally rip it in half. Later, a pack of hyenas chases and nips at a young wildebeest until it falls, and they immediately begin feeding on its soft, bloody belly. As the animal, still alive, looks out with what seems a serene stare, a narrator explains: "By this time, it is so numbed by shock that it hardly reacts..." Soon, the hyenas are chased away by vultures, which claw and peck one another to get at the meat. [Viewers are programmed to be voyeurs of violence—passive, but approving participants.] Yet predator programmers do have their limits. Discovery says it won't air human footage in a planned cannibal show. [Maybe NEXT season.]

DESTABILIZATION IN EUROPE:
CRIMINALS WITH AIDS
HAVE CARTE BLANCHE IN ITALY

From the August 9 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

TURIN, Italy—A group of bank robbers, secure in the knowledge that they cannot be jailed under Italian law because they have AIDS, has been freed again after their fourth hold-up in three weeks, police, said Tuesday. The group, dubbed the "AIDS-gang" by Italian newspapers, rob banks in full view of security cameras, in broad daylight and without face masks. Police said they had released three gang members, drug addicts diagnosed as having AIDS in the final stages, after the latest robbery committed Friday because Italian law states full-blown AIDS victims [using the term loosely] cannot be held in prison. [By the way, according to the Associated Press, AIDS is now the No. 1 cause of death for Americans ages 25 to 44.]

GERMAN PUNKS PROMISE DISORDER

From a recent issue of THE BILLINGS GAZETTE, [quoting:]

BONN, Germany (AP)—No one is an "organizer" of the ritualized disorder. [Ha!] But a program prepared for "Chaos Days '95" reads as follows:

Friday, 3 p.m.: Street fights.

Saturday, 11 a.m.: Games with fire.

Sunday: Glass-breaking demonstration.

german punks

It wasn't clear if the schedule, faxed to some reporters, [Ah, a media event!] would be followed. But then, rules were meant to be broken. While most Germans head to the beach or mountains, thousands of anarchist punks [right-wing radicals] have converged on the northern city of Hanover to spend a weekend drinking and trashing the city. Last year's goal, according to leaflets distributed then, was to "reduce Hanover to rubble". The punks succeeded in racking up $42,000 worth of broken windows and burned cars. More than 1,000 were arrested. This year's goal is 10,000 arrests, a leaflet circulated last month said.

The punks even let police know they would be back exactly one year later. They expect 5,000 to show up, though police estimate only about 2,500 have arrived. "They just like to have fun," [police spokeswoman Annette] Bennefeld said. "Fun as they define it means beating people up, smashing windows, drinking a lot of alcohol." [Imagine how much fun they could have if they get AIDS and go to Italy!]

MAMMOGRAMS EXPOSED: THE NEW MEDICAL HERETICS

From an article by Joseph Perkins in the July 31-August 5 issue of THE WASHINGTON TIMES NATIONAL WEEKLY EDITION, [quoting:]

A new study has appeared in the British medical journal Lancet that has roiled the medical communities on both sides of the Atlantic. Two respected Canadian cancer researchers conclude that mammograms save so few lives and cause women such needless anxiety, that they are not worth the time and money. Charles Wright of Vancouver Hospital and Barbara Mueller of McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, analyzed the results of six screening trials between 1982 and 1992 in New York, Canada, Sweden, and Edinburgh. These trials showed a reduction in breast cancer deaths of a scant 1/100th of 1 percent. Moreover, the researchers found, of the mammograms that showed positive or suspicious results, 80-93 percent were false-positives. That means that eight to nine times out of 10, a follow-up biopsy revealed no breast cancer.

The public policy implication of all this is obvious, according to Dr. Wright and Mueller. "Although politically attractive, the benefits of mass screening, even in older women, are too small and the harm and cost generated too great to justify widespread implementation of screening mammography as a publicly funded health measure."

Of course, this conclusion does not conform to politically accepted thinking by the medical establishment either in Canada or here in the United States. So Charles Wright and Barbara Mueller are now viewed as health care heretics. And the American Cancer Society continues to urge women of all ages to schedule regular mammograms. It's an unspoken conspiracy by the medical establishment to undermine or distort any research that differs from conventional wisdom. [Remind me again, please, when and where "medical-establishment doctors have their place?"]

MITZVAH TO THE DEAD

This article by Serge Schmemmann appeared in the August 6 issue of THE GAZETTE, MONTREAL, [quoting:]

JERUSALEM—When terror strikes in Israel, as when a suicide bomber blew up a bus near Tel Aviv recently, the religious men in the black hats and white smocks invariably arrive almost as soon as the police. Their self-appointed mitzvah, or sacred duty, is to gather every last piece of flesh and drop of blood scattered by a disaster, so the bodies of the victims can be buried as completely as possible. [In case you were thinking this was an article about the Jewish religion, correct yourself immediately. It is part of ongoing mind-control programming about the “poor Israeli martyrs, victims of Arab aggression”.]

One of those at the Ramat Gan disaster scene last week was Yehuda Meshi-Zahav, 34, who is proud of the service he does. “This is one of the holiest acts that a Jew can perform,” said Meshi-Zahav, who works with settlers in Gaza and is a spokesman for the rigorously orthodox Jews called haredim. “For the purification of the soul, the body has to be restored. [Let’s just hope none of them get “raptured”!] A Jew killed is a martyred Jew [even if killed in the act of a crime?], so it is a real mitzvah, and especially so because so few can do it.” [Enough of this!]

CAN TRUTH BE COPYRIGHTED?

This comes from an article by Mike Allen that appeared in a recent edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES, [quoting:]

ARLINGTON, Va.—The Church of Scientology is battling a band of on-line dissidents who have used the Internet to mail out globally its secret scriptures, for which some members must pay thousands of dollars. [I think that’s a CLUE! What does God charge for the Truth? Simply the willingness to give up the Lie!] Saturday, as a result of a copyright infringement lawsuit, U.S. marshals here seized the computer of a former church employee who had electronically posted a 136-page text that he said was available in court records. The former employee, Arnaldo P. Lerma, 44, said many members had surrendered their life savings in return for the document, which contains instructions for progressing through levels of spirituality, or thetans.

He said the text had been filed by a defendant in a case brought by the church in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles. “You have to jump through a lot of expensive hoops to get access to this,” Lerma, a self-employed designer of electronic systems, said in an interview. “This is the big secret at the end of the rainbow, and you could go to the court clerk and get it for 50 cents a page. The Internet is the First Amendment in silicon.” After Lerma posted the text July 31, the document quickly became available for copying on computers in Finland, Germany and elsewhere around the world. Demand for the document was so great in Beijing that this notice appeared Thursday: “Demand for the Scientology documents was seriously affecting network access for the entire country. As the documents are now freely available at a multitude of other sites, access to our directory serves no further purpose, and it has been closed to the public.”

The marshals were carrying out an order by Judge Leonie M. Brinkema of U.S. District Court in Alexandria. The Religious Technology Center, which holds copyrights to the confidential texts of Scientology, sued Lerma in that court Friday, accusing him of copyright infringement and trade secret misappropriation. [Trade secrets?!—i.e., a business enterprise, rather than Truth-bringing. You can’t copyright the Truth. And God has no secrets.] Kobrin said the church had filed a similar suit in federal court in San Jose, Calif., in February. She said that in that case, which is pending, a former member had distributed confidential and copyrighted material. Kobrin said that after the man was sued, he posted 900 critical computer messages about the church in five months. The cases demonstrate the instant strength that the global computer network gives opponents of governments and religions. Lerma said the disputed document spread world-wide after he posted it in a topical message center, or newsgroup, started by a critic of Scientology. [L. Ron Hubbard, founder of Scientology and Dianetics, said in a 1965 essay, “I know no man who has any monopoly upon the wisdom of this universe. It belongs to those who can use it to help themselves and others.” I wonder how that would apply to copyrights? Did you know L. Ron was a great admirer of “The Beast” himself, Aleister Crowley?]

PENTAGON STUDY REJECTS GULF WAR SYNDROME

This AP article by John Diamond comes from the ALBUQUERQUE JOURNAL and fits in nicely with the article on this subject on the Front Page, [quoting:]

WASHINGTON—A study of more than 10,000 veterans and family members suffering post-Gulf War medical problems found no evidence of any unique disease or disorder [What an interesting choice of words], the Pentagon’s top medical official said Tuesday. The study turned up instances of back pain, headache, alcoholism, depression and other ailments, but no mystery illness stemming from the desert war. The study involved thorough medical examinations of 10,020 veterans and family members who had complained of one or more of a variety of symptoms. Nearly 700,000 service members served in the Gulf War.

While earlier Pentagon examinations of a smaller pool of veterans turned up similar results, Tuesday’s announcement marked the first categorical rejection by the Defense Department of the existence of an unknown malady stemming from the 1990-1991 desert disorders.

A: Still the Bible. A check of book stores every year or so proves it again. (From the August 1 issue of THE MODESTO BEE)

GULF WAR SYNDROME

U. S. SELLS BIOLOGICALS TO IRAQ PART II: GEORGE BUSH & U. S. OUTBREAK!

by Rick Martin 8/21/95

Kawaja has a 28-year security career, both in electronic/computer-based systems and in physical security in investigative analysis. His company, The International Security Group (which no longer exists), was a systems house and did large proprietary DOD/DOE work with defense contractors and large high-risk systems, internationally.

In 1988-89, Kawaja's company was awarded a one-million-dollar security contract for a computer-based system for a food processing plant, PIT or Product Ingredient Technology in Boca Raton, Florida. After being contracted to the project that was supposedly to manufacture an all natural cherry-flavored food additive with a very high risk system, Kawaja found that one of the products or by-products of the PIT plant was hydrogen cyanide.

Now, we'll just move right into the interview...

Peter: I was steered through people in the ex-intelligence field while looking for bodyguards and procuring materials to the second in command of the U.S. Secret Service, Paul Sweeney, who to my amazement volunteered to terminate his position to come to Florida to work as a bodyguard for the Barboutis.

Jeff: Wow.

Peter: So, that was an interesting beginning of turn of events for me to have that happen.

Jeff: This is one to two years prior to Operation Desert Storm?

Peter: That is correct. Now, what is very important and how this ties together with, again, the headquarters for IBI (Ishan Barbouti International) was in Houston, Texas at the Gold Building, as it was called for many reasons—for the flow of money—but at 777 Post Oak Bldg., downtown Houston. I hear the building is abandoned at this time. It's a large office building. However, the Barboutis had holdings throughout the United States and, as you spoke with Joyce Riley, you know of the other biologicals that were developed in the Texas area and tested on the Huntsville prison inmates.

In Florida the specific strain, as there were several of them, of the hydrogen cyanide was called Prussian Blue, and it's very key in that Prussian Blue was being tested on gas mask filters about a year-and-a-half prior to the Persian Gulf War. So, that's very, very critical.

Jeff: I see. What happened next?

Peter: As things were going, how I got to know what I know and the evidence that I acquired is, I took the initial concerns to the CIA, the FBI, and U.S. Customs and actually operated for the United States Government under a code-name. I was told that IBI—that these people were international terrorists and that the government was going to prosecute them. So, I was misled actually because, as I began to acquire my evidence—and I don't think anyone thought I would take it to an extreme as to bugging phones and doing other types of things like that, especially recording conversations of federal agents which I acquired—conversations with CIA, FBI, counter-intelligence, Customs agents, attorneys, members of Congress, people all the way up to the White House—calls from the United States to London and Baghdad. I amassed a lot of evidence which, in putting it together, found that in fact, this was not happening covertly in the United States but with the knowledge, consent, and assistance, and actually, what you would call a joint-venture with U.S. Intelligence and the United States Government.

Jeff: Do you remember the time when that realization really hit you?

Peter: Well, yes.

Jeff: And wondering how you felt at that time? Betrayed, duped, deceived?

Peter: Yes, very much so, betrayed. And as a result, I lost my wife through that and I lost a lot of other things, but very much betrayed in that I went to the people, I thought, who were to protect America, to protect what was happening. And, in fact, what I was doing was going to the enemy. I was turning over information to people who knew what was going on and were involved in it and basically, I guess they wanted to know how much of a leak there would be, what I would do and what evidence I would acquire. As a result, two weeks prior to the war with Iraq, on July 16, 1990, I refused to believe that the entire U.S. Government was involved in this conspiracy. I sent a Federal Express package to the National Security Agency to code-name M323CF and I issued a warning that Iraqi intelligence was operating in the United States and in close proximity to a classified military project and I asked two very deadly questions in writing:

(1) Is our military in a joint-venture with IBI to develop chemical and biological weapons for the U.S.?
And,

(2) Does the President know?

As most people should be aware, Mr. Bush has claimed to have been left out of the loop on prior occasions when he was accused of criminal wrong doing...

Jeff: Don't they all?

Peter: Yes, sir, but he is the master of this act. Of course, I already knew the answers. I wanted something from them. What I got from them was a visit by eight Nazi-Gestapo federal agents with automatic weapons who came to my door with a search warrant to serve, by President Bush, under the International Emergency Economic War Powers Act. They came and sequestered me under armed guard for four hours. I was not allowed to view the search. I was not even shown the search warrant. They took boxes of documents and tape recordings from my place of business and I was threatened not to discuss this with the media.

Jeff: Or?

Peter: Or else, OK? Let me say that, at this time, I have a suit against federal agents and agents of FinCEN and U.S. attorneys and although I can speak very candidly about most things, there are some things that I will dance around only because it is evidence yet to prosecute people. As a result, what they did with the evidence, however—this was in early 1990—they sealed it and made it “national security” and to this day, actually, it is still national security. No one has been indicted or prosecuted and no evidence was ever presented to a Grand Jury to prosecute anyone, although I was subpoenaed to at least three Grand Juries, supposedly inquiring into the criminal activities of IBI and was the star witness for the U.S. Government.

No one thought that I would live for five years or the last four years, and I did, just barely. I’ve been hospitalized and attempts made on my life including attempting to blow up my vehicle. My wife suffered. I suffered a loss of my wife as a result of that. After four years I have been able to unseal that affidavit. I do not have the evidence; it is still considered national security. What the unsealing has done, it has basically been discovered to be a signed confession by federal agents and the U.S. Government in that they made a very, very strong case to the Magistrate in 1990 before anyone was harmed in Operation Desert Storm. And in the document, they actually are confessing now. What they are stating is they knew what was going to take place in the Persian Gulf. They knew about these weapons. They knew about gas mask penetration. They know all of these things that we’ve just been talking about and how the biologicals were developed and delivered on our troops with the mask penetration agent, Prussian Blue. If you remember when CNN aired some of the goings on about the Gulf War, there were some question brought up to President Bush as to why he did not wish to change the gas masks of the American forces to the same type of quick-change gas mask filters that the coalition forces had. And, of course, the public did not understand why. It really didn’t matter whether you had a ten-second filter that you could change or a thirty-minute filter—it didn’t have anything to do with it. You were going to get your dose either way. So, there were many things that took place during the war that, again, we just did not know, as far as the public.

Jeff: Peter, two things, and I hope it’s not too personal. You mentioned twice that you lost your wife; what exactly happened?

Peter: It is a warfare agent that was used against her and that is evidence in my suit to prosecute these people. However, after she died I received a phone call from an agent delivering a message to me. Several threats were made on my life, including that the Pentagon issued a warning to me which came by the way of a Mr. Dave McMichaels at 2001 5th St., NW, Suite 740, Washington, D.C. phone number 202-483-9222. Part of the message goes like this: “Tell Peter Kawaja to chew on it. If he comes forward, we will deny. If he has evidence, credible witnesses will come forward and testify against him.” That’s the non-death part of the threat. This was after they had relieved me of documents and they were doing the “what if they didn’t get it all?” As Joyce Riley told you, when she tried to call for a Congressional investigation with my documents, the only thing the National Security Agency wanted to know was, did they get all the copies of Peter Kawaja's evidence? And that was the only thing they were concerned about.

Part of the reason I am still alive today is that I am more dangerous dead than I am alive. I'm sure they're aware of that, although it doesn't mean they didn't attempt nor would like to still see me dead.

Jeff: They killed your wife. They've threatened you. You have somehow managed to protect yourself by making yourself so dangerous they would rather have you alive. This has been an ordeal that few men or women could go through. I wanted to ask the other question. Do you feel that, at some level, somewhere, American troops were sent over there with the full knowledge they would be used as guinea pigs to see how this stuff played out in large laboratory settings?

Peter: Oh, definitely, definitely. It's not a matter of question, and by the way for the listeners, I mentioned I have a suit. There are two cases going on right now. When I speak, I speak from authority.

First, as being someone directly involved and doing work for the government in amassing the evidence. Of course, they never thought I would amass what I did, and/or dare to bug certain buildings or phone lines or acquire intercepted transmissions for the CCC-BNL from Switzerland, so my story is very lengthy. It couldn't be covered in one show. The evidence that I have proves what was to take place in the Gulf War and that, in fact, the Persian Gulf War was orchestrated several years in advance and you run down the players who are put into place and these people who are moved around to include John Deutch, who is now the CIA Director, who used to be involved—he's a professor of chemistry at MIT and chaired the Defense Science Board. Brent Scowcroft was a consultant to the BNL. Scowcroft and Lawrence Eagleburger and James Baker, who were on the payroll of Henry Kissinger/Kissinger & Associates. Scowcroft and Kissinger, actually, wanted to go to war immediately with George Bush when Iraq went into Kuwait. Dan Mica, former member of Congress, also a Kissinger Associate—we recorded many conversations of politicians who came into town and I also bugged the corporate apartment, which was the guest suite for these officials, in meetings in very expensive, lavish surroundings and restaurants. Haidar Barbouti, the doctor's son, is discussing with members of Congress about the cyanide and dumping it into the water supplies in the United States and they refer to it as "Cyonara". So, there were several agendas that were taking place and, in fact, the unsealing of the affidavit now proves that warfare-grade, free cyanide was dumped into the city of Boca Raton's water supply. There may be other places that I cannot discuss and other things that were dumped down. I have since found that the city of Boca Raton has gone into the plant, poured cement down the drains, and has been going there periodically to take water sample tests in the area. What people need to know is that the plant, when it was shut down in 1990, after I broke the initial story publicly—what happened is that the RTC took it over. Then, mysteriously, Century Arms International appears on the scene to have occupied the building. You need to check out their background and ties to CIA and British MI-6. They were flying the British flag over that building until I released a document and made it public about what was taking place there and I have personally videotaped and taken pictures since, because I live in Boca Raton, of missiles that are being stored in a residential community—in the same place where a warfare plant was—in the heart of the Jewish community for South Florida. So, the public does not know any of this. [see box next page]

Jeff: Well, Peter, they're going to know a little bit more of it after tonight. [Break]

We're talking about some horrifying things. Peter, you just told me a moment or two ago that you actually have tape recorded Congressmen and a relative of the Barbouti family talking about cyanide in drinking water in Boca Raton's water system.

Peter: Yes.

Jeff: Why?

Peter: Well, it's not just cyanide alone, by the way, and it is warfare grade, what's called free cyanide. That is also the same ingredient that is common in what happened in Switzerland, Waco, Japan...

Jeff: In the subways, you mean?

connie mack lett
2 page

Peter: Yes, all of these—also the World Trade Center bombing...

Jeff: There was cyanide in that?

Peter: Yes, sir. What happened, why it did not kill as many people, if you go back to the early reports—I could fax you a copy of the document—but the judge prosecuting the case stated that the bomb—the terrorists made a little boo-boo—that the bomb was so powerful that the tanks of sodium cyanide did not vaporize. They were exploded and blown away. So, there was a two-fold purpose of the bomb. If in fact the cyanide had vaporized, everybody in the north tower would have died, so it would have been a worse disaster than the Murrah [Oklahoma City] Building.

And, by the way, of course we're jumping ahead but there is no way to tell this in a sequential form...

Jeff: There's too much information.

Peter: At the Murrah Building [bombed], the V.A. hardfiles that were being kept on the returning Desert Storm veterans of their illnesses, the critical ones, were transferred to the Murrah Building and, gee, wouldn't you know? They got destroyed in that building.

Jeff: So the Gulf War Syndrome files are gone?

Peter: Yes, sir. Along with, of course, the NBC logs which are the nuclear, biological and chemical logs; the government is now claiming that some of them got accidentally burned.

I would like for the government and Janet Reno and Louis Freeh to know, of course—this message is for them—they know they have come already with an illegal warrant. So, nothing is at my home. I have miscellaneous copies but somehow, someone sent me more than 10 pages, I won't say how many hundred pages of the NBC [Nuclear/Biological/Chemical] logs before they were destroyed—proved several things: that GF [a nerve agent] was found by the Israeli mili- tary police, although the United States continues to deny the existence of GF in Iraq's arsenal after the Persian Gulf War, and that the MSDS on GF originates at the U.S. Army Chemical and Biological Defense Command at Edgewood Army Engineering Center, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland. It's very, very critical.

What people need to know also is that the PB pill, the Pyridostigmine Bromide pill was not to counteract Soman, as stated by the DOD, but was to counteract GF. That's why that is very critical.

Jeff: Which was given to hundreds of thousands of troops.

Peter: That's correct. So, again, proving what was going to take place in the Persian Gulf War. In other words, if you know what is going to be deployed on troops and you prepare or supply them with, supposedly, the antidote, that was part of the test and only one.

Jeff: You're talking about a big laboratory experiment here.

Peter: Very big. You don't need 700,000 troops to take out a tiny little country like Iraq and, in fact, it proved itself out that we waged an air campaign rather than a ground war. That was planned, of course; there was a build-up over a long period of time.

Getting back to—prior to—the crimes. I would like to name some more criminals for the American public. As they were trying to take my evidence from me, one of the tricks I was referring to, a Trevor Armbruster, who is the senior editor of READER'S DIGEST as CIA, who arranged with James Baker III to fly me, and these were the words almost verbatim, "James Baker is waiting. We're going to fly you and land you and deliver you right on the steps of the White House." Of course, you understand the only aircraft that could land on White House grounds would be the Presidential choppers. And, James Baker was waiting for me; however, there was one stipulation—I had to bring all of my originals.

Jeff: Oh yeah.

Peter: I did not accept the offer. Howard Hebert at Defense Imaging and DBA Systems, a Defense contractor in Melbourne, was a very close friend of Brent Scowcroft. So, Mr. Scowcroft and Mr. Bush are not going to be able to state that he was left out of the loop. They were relayed information from me. There is just so much evidence as to what took place and, in keeping in line with the players, Janet Reno, of course, was moved to become Attorney General. Those of you who are familiar with her activities in Miami, Florida—she is from Miami, Florida as a prosecutor and person who covered-up VOTESCAM. Are you familiar with that?

Jeff: Yes, yes. She's got, allegedly, an incredibly sordid, immoral past.

Peter: Very disgusting, immoral past and I, of course, being the upstanding American I am, I would not lower myself to talk about the terrible things they talked about when they were doing this Clarence Henry Thomas thing because if I were, I would mention things that Attorney General Janet Reno was found in awkward positions with young females—of course, I won't say that. Certain Miami police approached me with pictures and things like that, but I won't talk about Janet Reno in that manner. She hired, knowingly as Attorney General, John Hogan to investigate and write the BNL Task Force Report and I don't know if you've seen that report. However, John Hogan was also, gee, a Miami attorney. And, also, happened to be a Miami attorney who represented none other than IDI, the Barboutis. So, naturally, the BNL Task Force Report on Iraqgate, the only section in the BNL Task Force Report that is considered national security is on, guess who, IDI. So, the Attorney General of the United States—as far as I'm concerned and I would like to charge her with felonies, multiple felonies—has lied to the American people. Not only is she the butch-er of Waco, but she has perpetrated many crimes against Americans in knowingly hiring an attorney who the government—and, by the way, I have secret, government documents, U.S. intelligence documents, Dept. of Defense documents that prove the United States Government itself state and prove—not me—I would not dare call Haidar Barbouti and Dr. Barbouti terrorists, even though they are. The United States Government has proved that, and yet, the Attorney General hires a Miami lawyer who worked for the same terrorists to write a report in such a manner that nothing took place in Desert Storm.

So, that will give you an idea of what's going on. Of course, James McAdams, the U.S. attorney who handled the cover-up of the BCCNL [CCC-BNL?], was also moved to Miami to also hide and cover up the Noriega scandal, which was drugs; and then, was moved to West Palm Beach, to, when I opened my lawsuit against federal agents, to cover-up Iraqgate and Gulf War Illness. When the process server went to serve the U.S. Attorney Tom O'Mally there and other agents, we found that Mr. McAdams was conveniently recalled to Washington on a special one-year assignment. His secretary is still there. His office is still in West Palm Beach but he is conveniently not available.

So, that will give you just an idea of a few players and I name them from the CIA all the way down. I am involved in the criminal aspects of it now. Let me say that I received in 1995, March 29, 1995, in addition to my suit that I have filed against federal agents, from the Inspector General, Dept. of Defense, a letter to me regarding some evidence that I sent to President Clinton. They make mention of that and I have the document that I could send to you. President Clinton, apparently, turned over the evidence to the Dept. of Defense, and they issued a case number to me—95-L59724 and opened up a case under my name regarding the Persian Gulf War. I was told that is highly unusual, however, I am not sure what the trick is here. I have called at the Pentagon, the same Pentagon that threatened me several years ago and they have until 9/20/95 before they will release any information. However, that will give you an idea that I think I have a few people worried as to what is going to happen with my evidence. [See box next page.]

Now, what has happened with my suit is that the United States Government has appointed powerful U.S. attorneys to defend these criminal agents. They responded by putting in a Motion to Dismiss my complaint. They did not deny my charges. What they are stating is that even if the defendants committed misconduct—treason and war crimes—that's a new word, buzzword is “misconduct”, they should still have immunity. Now, what happened with this response, I was given one day to respond. The judge—they pulled a trick—there are many illegalities they've done against me. I am fighting these powerful people—but it proves that they cannot fight me or fight the truth. When they responded with this, the judge then sent a separate order, ordering me and giving me one day to respond to their Motion to Dismiss. I fooled them and walked into the federal building and filed a two-and-a-half-inch-thick document with evidence, within the one day. Two days later I received a telephone call from the judge's secretary. They canceled the hearing that was to take place in another two days; this was in March of 1995. I filed a Motion for Continuance and they are in Default and have not continued. What they are doing is stalling either to kill me or hope that this will go away, or in fact, when they did that Notice it was done in March. And, conveniently, the Dept. of Defense issues me on March 29, a case number all of a sudden. So, what they are saying is that there is an ongoing investigation on criminals and on terrorists and that is the way they can keep my evidence as national security. Because as long as they claim there is an on-going investigation they cannot unseal any documents.

Jeff: It sounds almost like, Peter, they could also volleyball you around until the cows come home, if they really wanted to. It's got to be very frustrating for you. You're an extremely courageous man, brave; I don't know what word to even give you. But, you are obviously a man of great resolve and integrity and I think they know that.

Peter: Yes, they tried to buy me. I was offered, through another deal, a hundred-million dollars. I was offered untold sums of money. I was even recently offered a contract with the V.A., of all people, which I turned down. That was something that came through the President's office, I won't go into greater detail. But, this was an attempt to buy me off with a lucrative contract if I were to help Desert Stormers, of course, and compile the evidence for the government to help them to save these Gulf War veterans. Well, I don't need to do that because I am helping Gulf War veterans and I am not going to collect the evidence for the same government that is trying to kill Americans.

Jeff: Peter, we're going to have to pause for our next break. We're talking with Peter Kawaja on the Gulf War Syndrome, which comes from Operation Desert Storm where troops, maybe 200,000 people now infected with organisms that were generated by the Iraqis as warfare measures, which in turn and prior to that were manufactured, apparently, here in the United States and sold to the Iraqis prior to 1990. Peter, how many different biological warfare agents have you come across that you feel were involved in the war?

Peter: That would be a piece of evidence I couldn't say, however, it wasn't a matter of just—let me clarify something. There are two types of tests, actually more than two, but it wasn't just what was sold to Saddam Hussein. It was a matter of things that we developed ourselves that we tested on our own troops and, in fact, some of the vaccines—I'm not sure, are you familiar with Abe and First Flight?

Jeff: No.

Peter: Those were two horses that were originally pastured in Minnesota by the Joint Chiefs of Staff who became, all of a sudden, they became, I guess, ranchers. But these horses were being shot-up with anti-botulism, gradually increasing where they could take a hot toxin shot when one dose would kill a thousand horses. That's where they got the plasma. Eventually, they were moved to Ft. Detrick, Maryland and under the Joint Chiefs of Staff supervision that had at least a hundred horses or more that I can document from where they got the plasma for the vaccine.

Jeff: These horses could take botulism and survive it, you're saying?

Peter: Yes, sir.

Jeff: Unbelievable.

Peter: It is, sir. But, you know, we would get into another area of an anaerobic cell and what they are looking—you know, some of these babies who are deformed—babies who are born. That is a specific—that is one of the tests, by the way, being able to have someone either grow limbs, like a lizard if you cut the tail off and the tail regrows—it's sort of genetic engineering or manufacturing human bodies where you can have people with or without specific limbs and that is what Joyce Riley is talking about. It is not just an accident. There were many tests that were conducted in the Persian Gulf War. There are certain drugs that are now available, one of them for the treatment of Alzheimer's. The problem that the DOD is going to have with me and the FDA is that, where are the years of human trials? What happened is, in the Persian Gulf War, some of it was for military purposes and control of world population and things like that. Another part of it was for money and to test certain types of weapons and/or drugs that they would need—it would be illegal, in other words, to do that in a civilized society.

Jeff: Yes.

Peter: You wouldn't be able to do that. But they were saying, well, we have this war. It's a crisis. We don't have time to check out whether it is safe to administer this or not, so that's where we come in with this "informed consent" waiver that they were asked to sign. Basically, what the military did to all of our Desert Storm veterans is say, "Hey, we're not telling you what we're really doing but why don't you sign this little piece of paper because what we want to do is make you a rat and we're going to experiment with you in this war." It's just a crisis, you know, although the war was planned, you see?

Jeff: Yes.

Peter: Much of this is evidence that I have and it is just very, very sad for me to know what I know and to have gone through that. It is just unbelievable and my heart goes out to Gulf War veterans, but it is more than that. At this stage, what America needs to do is understand that I am talking about crimes perpetrated, war crimes, greater than any other crime in the history of the United States of America. Crimes against Americans, perpetrated specifically against Americans by supposedly the people who are suppose to protect us. You cannot leave this end here. You cannot just say the civilian population always wants to think it will not effect them. This is not only about military. This is a communicable disease. It is a slow form of Ebola Zaire. It transforms itself into all forms of cancer, and ultimately, death. Where it will go is death. It is not something which is just Chronic Fatigue that a lot of people think it is. So, it is a warfare agent by design and it is going to kill an immense amount of people and there are hundreds of thousands of people around the world now who are sick and dying. There is just a uniform blackout by the normal media about this; it's just terrible. They're not carrying the information. And if you heard about these individual staph, strep and TB outbreaks, these mini-outbreaks that you are hearing—that is part of the Gulf War Illness. So, I don't know if you've had any of that in your area but I am hearing it all over and the streptococcus...

Jeff: Sure, Group A strep, yes.

Peter: Yes, sir, and the flesh-eating. All of that has to do with the Gulf War Illness. As a result, if you would check, there have been so many outbreaks since the Persian Gulf War. Now, what the government is preparing everyone for is—I saw a TV program about two weeks ago and they are admitting or preparing America that it is not IF but WHEN will there be a world-wide outbreak. And they are trying to say that it is because of this international air travel that somebody is going to bring back the Ebola. In fact, all of these are warfare agents that were tested on people and in foreign countries. And it is not such, as Christians try to believe, that this God is punishing, like with AIDS, people of sin. It is, these are man-made weapons of war, including the HIV, and of course you know there are thousands of different strains of HIV.

Jeff: There are 2003 at last count that have been identified by the Pasteur Institute, not all of which are fatal but certainly each one of those organisms mutates quickly.

Peter: There you go. All of this is part of a plan by design and, of course, it leads into what we call the New World Order Plan. Sort of a cleansing, an ethnic cleansing. It is a also a way to kill off or—most of the military is so sick. It is not just a matter of a few. And, of course, there are 300,000 foreign troops or U.N. troops in the United States almost making it a one-to-one where, on every military base if you've got a real American, you've got also some sort of foreigner there sitting side-by-side which is very disturbing to me. Very disturbing to me.

Jeff: At the very least. Time for our last break. Peter, many many people, maybe millions, have CFS (Chronic Fatigue Syndrome). Certainly not all of that came from the Gulf War, or do you think most of it did?

Peter: Well, again, I would be foolish to try to be the expert to say that but yes, as far as I'm concerned unless it was prior to 1990, the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome as it is out there today is as the result of the Persian Gulf War. And that's sad because it will not end with just that. That is the beginning of the symptoms.

I'd like to get something about Congress and John Scheibel. In 1991, when I tried to do an exposé with ABC NIGHTLINE and THE FINANCIAL TIMES joint-venture, THE FINANCIAL TIMES OF LONDON—I don't know if you remember seeing me on NIGHTLINE but I appeared there with Ted Koppel.

Jeff: No, I missed that.

Peter: It was brief and they did a partial exposé about this. When I questioned them about why they really didn't do a hard-hitting show they responded to me that, "We did not want to topple the entire U.S. Government."

Jeff: (Laughter.)

Peter: That's kind of like what ABC did, but I think they were on a fishing trip to find out what I know. They did some sort of exposé and for that I'm thankful. But, as a result of that I got a call from John Scheibel and he is on the sub-committee of International Economic Policy and Trade investigating the army of Iraq, and he asked me one question. "Who are you more afraid of..."—by the way, Mr. Scheibel, I tape recorded that call. "...Who are you more afraid of, George Bush or Saddam Hussein?" I replied, "George Bush." Scheibel immediately said, "Do not try him in the media," and hung-up. Within three months my wife died, amongst other people. I would like to also ask the question: is the public aware that Ron Brown is the U.S. Arms vice-president of marketing? Are you aware of that and does the American public know that U.S. Arms operates out of the Pentagon? What is the agenda of the U.S. Government or U.S. Arms? I'd like to read you an open letter, very short, a couple sentences, from President Clinton. And every president, as they get elected, miraculously become the C.E.O. of U.S. Arms. So, here is the statement. [Quoting:]

To Our Shareholders:

Strong growth in lean years is the hallmark of competitiveness and U.S. Arms has had a very competitive year. Some shareholders were worried by my campaign promise to press for strong international limits on the dangerous and wasteful flow of weapons to troubled regions. But I can assure you that I have held fast to the course set by former C.E.O.s Ronald Reagan and George Bush. The end of the Cold War has caused a drop in both domestic and global arms demand. U.S. Arms has responded by spending shareholder money to develop export markets in Asia and the Middle East. As a result, our share of global conventional arms agreements rose from 17 percent in 1988, (two years prior to the Gulf War), to 70 percent in 1993. And, thanks to the efforts of our marketing team, the majority of our 1993 sales were to a promising new market, the developing world. In order to insure stability, unelected governments and developing countries feel the need to acquire more arms. (Oh, God.) We are reaching out to them vigorously; where we once catered to Cold War political allegiances, we now aggressively respond to supply and demand. With Russia, our major competitor, still severely crippled, we can look forward to several years of spectacular growth. [End quoting.]

Jeff: An astonishing letter. It's amazing.

Peter: Amazing, isn't it?

Jeff: Yes, you know you mentioned a lot of names earlier in this program. Names that have been around for many years. They continue to play musical chairs with this cast of characters—I don't want to call them ghouls, but—they certainly are involved in some pretty ghoulish business, according to you.

Peter: These are not allegations. Again, documents back this up and personal experience backs it up. That's exactly what you have. It's lateral shifting. People get put into positions. You know, if you are in the private sector in a business, you become general manager or president because you work your way up and you've done good. It seems that in the government, if you are moved into a position, it is because you've done bad or you've got skeletons so that the powers that be can control you. That's kind of how Janet Reno got shifted. The CIA Director gets shifted, John Deutch, involved in biological weapons. All of these people are players in these great crimes. It is just so very sad. I have very little to hold onto. I hold onto this only through my faith and only because I am avenging the death of my wife and the death of all Gulf War veterans and Americans and the atrocities. I know that one day I will die. It is a matter of time that they will kill me. I want the public to know that, no matter, if they have evidence and a video recording of Sister Mary Theresa standing over my dead body and a signed confession from her, I want the American people to know that I will die at the hands of my own government or, supposedly, the government of America. And I am wondering who the good guys are any more. So, I'd just like to make that statement. I live every day knowing that today could be my last. And it almost has been several times. And I've been in exile as a political prisoner in this country that is supposedly a free nation. That's basically where it's at. I am not going to quit. I can't quit because too many people are dying and it is a nation-wide outbreak at this stage and America needs to wake up and it is not a matter of getting mad. I am not a member of a militia group, although I support them. I am not suggesting that people take up arms. I am saying, "You better get ready because this is going to be something devastating, along with what's coming down with the New World Order." For those who do not understand what it is or why, you need to read the Constitution. You need to start finding out what's going on in this country. It is just too lengthy to cover here. That's basically my statement.

Jeff: Peter Kawaja, incredible. Breathtaking, heartrending story you've just told us. You're not selling anything. You're not out to profit. You've been offered huge amounts of money to shut up. You've lost your wife. How do you suggest the average America try to better inform him or herself?

Peter: They can contact the American Gulf War Veterans Association at 713-587-5437. They can also call me at 407-241-8407. We'd like to inform America of how they can help and I do need assistance in prosecuting the crime, but I have no product to sell. I sell no tapes and I am not writing a book.

Jeff: Thank you and we will remember this program for a long time. Would you come back and talk with us again?

Peter: Surely, I'd appreciate it.

Jeff: Thank you and the best of luck to you.

CHAPTER 14

THE SADDEST CHAPTER OF AMERICA'S HISTORY IS NOW BEING WRITTEN

The following is a fax received by CONTACT from Peter Kawaja on 8/22/95:

The people of America have yet to learn that indeed germ warfare was used on our servicemen/women during the Gulf War, and the greatest tragedy—it was a joint venture with the United States Government.

This information will shock, surprise, and sadden you. But yes, the worst is yet to come if Americans do not wake up and change our government. The evidence exists, and is overwhelming. Here are only a few atrocities committed against all of us:

* Chemical & Biological (germ) warfare weapons of mass destruction were made in Boca Raton, FL, and Houston, TX—by “international terrorists” working with U.S. intelligence.

* One of the special strains of HYDROGEN CYANIDE called Prussian Blue was being tested on Gas Mask Filters at the Florida Product Ingredient Technology (P-I-T) plant, for “gas mask penetration”—over a year prior to the Gulf War.

* The PIT plant was financed/engineered by the same Dr. Barbouti/IBI (Ishan Barbouti International), builder of the Pharma-150 chemical/biological complex, at Rabta, LIBYA.

* Former President George Bush, James Baker III, John Deutch (now CIA Director), had financial interests in some of the companies which developed/sold/transferred these weapons to IRAQ. Yes—whilst being Commander-in-Chief, President Bush was arming Saddam Hussein with these weapons of mass destruction, and two years later, “knowing” that (but the American Public did not)—placed American Forces in harms way.

* President Bush, Brent Scowcroft (NSC), and U.S. intelligence were behind the testing/use of Prussian Blue which rendered our Troops defenseless against the biological agents that were to be tested in the upcoming Gulf War, a war which was planned for this purpose, at least two years in advance.

* In addition, certain vaccines were “grown”, several years again “in-advance”, with prior specific knowledge of the type of weapon that the vaccine was designed to protect against. How did our military and Mr. Bush know, two years in advance, what weapons Iraq would use against us, so that “we” developed a specific vaccine/antidote for it?

* The Pyridostigmine Bromide (PB) Nerve Agent Pre-Treatment Pill was NOT to counteract Soman, as stated by the DOD, but was a counteractant for the nerve agent “GF”. The MSDS on GF originates at the U.S. Army Chemical & Biological Defense Command at Edgewood R&D Engineering Center, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Maryland. The U.S. has continually denied that GF was in Iraq’s arsenal after the Gulf War, yet the NBC (Nuclear/Biological/Chemical) Logs from CENTCOM (central command/Schwarzkopf) proves that the Israeli Military Police confirm finding GF. Why does the U.S. continually deny?

* The NBC Logs also prove that Schwarzkopf was given the authority to use our own chemical & biological weapons. There are Gulf veterans who were involved in shipping out our own supplies of these weapons, most are now sick, others have died. They will testify at the proper time if we act now, whilst they are still alive and willing to come forward.

* Peter Kawaja, a security specialist, was awarded a million-dollar security contract to provide a computer-based system for PIT, and was prime security contractor to IBI, providing bodyguards and other physical services. Kawaja was then asked (after being contracted) to install a hydrogen cyanide detection system.

* Kawaja became suspicious and took his concerns to the CIA/FBI/CUSTOMS, and operated for the government under a code name because he was told that these people (IBI) were “international terrorists”, and the government was going to prosecute them. This was in 1989, prior to any war, or anyone losing their life. Kawaja soon found however, that U.S. intelligence and the U.S. Government were acting in a joint venture with these same terrorists. Kawaja obtained video and audio recordings of these terrorists, federal agents and politicians (calls to/from the U.S., London, Baghdad), along with paper documents, and intercepted fax transmissions (originating from Switzerland) regarding the Commodity Credit Corp. - Banca Nazionale del Lavoro (CCC-BNL). Wanting to believe the entire government was not involved in this conspiracy, Kawaja sent a Federal Express package to code name M323CF at the National Security Agency, on July 16, 1990. Kawaja issued a warning of Iraqi intelligence operating inside the U.S., and in close proximity to a U.S. Classified Military Facility, and then asked these fatal questions:

- “Is our military in a joint venture with IBI to develop chemical/biological weapons for the U.S.?” , and then the big one,

- “Does the President know?” (as George Bush had priorly used the excuse: “I was left out of the loop,” when he was accused of being involved in other heinous crimes.)

The war was planned, and it went forward, however, 8 federal agents armed with automatic weapons raided Mr. Kawaja’s offices of the International Security Group (ISG) in 1990, sequestered him under armed guard for 4 hours, and removed boxes of documents and tapes, evidence against not only foreign terrorists, but more importantly, against federal agents, and numerous persons and politicians, all the way up to the President of the United States. The Search Warrant and Affidavit for Search was not shown to Kawaja, and he was threatened not to speak with the media. The evidence was taken “somewhere” for seven days, before being presented to the Magistrate, and was then SEALED and made SECRET from the American Public, as “national security”.

This illegal search was conducted through a warrant approved by President Bush obtained under the International Emergency Economic WAR POWERS ACT. When Mr. Kawaja tried to do an exposé to tell America about these crimes, as Gulf Veterans started getting sick and dying, he received a phone call from John Scheibel which was recorded (Subcommittee on International Economic Policy & Trade: re-Arming of IRAQ) who said, “Who are you more afraid of, George Bush or Saddam Hussein?” Kawaja replied, “George Bush.” Scheibel immediately said, “DO NOT TRY HIM IN THE MEDIA,” and hung up. Within 3 months, Eileen Kawaja, wife of Peter Kawaja—”DIED”. One of the agents later called Kawaja to deliver a message. Mr. Kawaja's life and "freedom" were threatened numerous times, all documented in various manners, including police reports; however, the FBI, who was informed, NEVER investigated.

* The Affidavit for Search was (4 years later) unsealed finally by Mr. Kawaja, after much effort. No one thought he would live to survive to get it unsealed. That Affidavit and other government documents, sworn to (under penalty of perjury) by federal agents PROVES, the U.S. Government knew what was going to take place in the war with Iraq.

* Federal agents provided their evidence of "gas mask penetration" at the PIT plant.

* Federal agents provided their evidence (excerpt from a letter to a U.S. Senator from Louis Champon, partner to Haidar Barbouti in the PIT project), "I can assure you, if drums of Cyanide left our plant, Dr. Barbouti had his reasons, EITHER TO BE USED AGAINST AMERICAN TROOPS (written in 1990, we were at war with Iraq, but no deaths yet) or FOR U.S. TERRORIST ACTS AGAINST US HERE AT HOME."

* Federal agents provided their evidence, that Barbouti had established "chemical warfare production capability, at a facility identified as Product Ingredient Technology, in Boca Raton, Florida."

* Federal agents provided their evidence, that Barbouti owned "specialty chemical companies" and a company in Europe identified as CROSS LINK, in Belgium (re: CCC-BNL).

* Federal agents provided their evidence, that Ishan Barbouti was supplying MILITARY items to IRAQ!

* All of this and more was sworn to by federal agents in 1990, yet all of it, and ALL evidence taken from Peter Kawaja under an illegal Search Warrant, WAS SEALED AND MADE SECRET FROM ALL AMERICA, and the President and Commander-in-Chief went ahead with the war with Iraq, and knowingly placed your sons, daughters, wives, and husbands in harm's way!

* None of this evidence was ever presented to a Grand Jury, to indict anyone. Yet, Peter Kawaja, who was subpoenaed to appear (to several) as the "star" witness for the U.S. government supposedly against the Barboutis et al., was NOT allowed to answer pertinent questions from the jurors, and when Kawaja attempted to tell the truth to the jurors, (AUSA) Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas O'Malley shut down the Grand Jury, dismissed Mr. Kawaja, and motioned to waiting federal agents (one of them from FinCEN) who approached Kawaja and threatened him inside a federal building (this was documented in 1991).

* No evidence obtained in the raid against Kawaja, was ever presented to the Grand Jury, yet, the U.S. Government considered Kawaja's evidence so critical, A WAR POWERS ACT AFFIDAVIT/SEARCH WARRANT was used to seize his evidence. Instead of presenting it to America and prosecuting the terrorists who the U.S. Government itself proved in their sworn affidavits were, our Government sealed all of the evidence, so you—America, would never know. Only because Peter Kawaja survived, after 4 years, he was able to unseal this sworn (CONFESSION) Affidavit.

* Whilst the DOD and VA continue to deny the existence of GWI (Gulf War Illness/Syndrome) and Veterans are dying by the thousands, the U.S. Government, in a separate action, has responded to Mr. Kawaja's lawsuit filed against some of these agents in 1994, and our government states as follows: "That criminal investigation is ongoing and is centered around persons involved in the manufacture and shipment of lethal and illegal chemicals to be used by terrorist nationals AGAINST the United States." The U.S. Attorney is attempting to have Kawaja's suit Dismissed, claiming the government has an ongoing investigation. Yet, all of the evidence exists to prosecute the criminals. There is no ongoing investigation. This is a tool and trick so that Kawaja's evidence can remain NATIONAL SECURITY, and you—America—will never see it. By "claiming" there is an ongoing investigation, our government can keep its secret—its crimes secret. However, in their same breath, in this response to Kawaja, they have admitted what the DOD continues to deny, that our troops were harmed by Chemical/Biological/Weapons "Made-in-the-USA". At the same time, claiming these federal agents should be granted immunity, even if they committed "misconduct" (Treason/War Crimes). Kawaja's suit will open up IRAQGATE and crimes against All Americans.

* James G. McAdams III (U.S. Attorney), who covered up the CCC-BNL, and the Noriega Case, was moved to West Palm Beach, Florida to cover up IRAQGATE and GULF WAR ILLNESS (GWI).

* Janet Reno, who was moved to Washington from Miami (see the book *Votescam), to become Attorney General, was also used to cover up Iraqgate. Reno appointed John Hogan "Counselor", to investigate and present the BNL TASK FORCE REPORT on Iraqgate/GWI. Mr. Hogan, an attorney, was also from Miami, and represented the Barboutis (IBI), the terrorists who the same U.S. Government proved were terrorists, and who supplied weapons to Iraq to kill Americans.

* The only MAJOR portion of Mr. Hogan's BNL report that is blacked out and considered NATIONAL SECURITY, is on the Terrorists, Ishan Barbouti (IBI). WHAT IS THE U.S. GOVERNMENT HIDING FROM AMERICA? HOW CAN TERRORISTS BE PROTECTED BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT?

* The PIT plant was taken over by the RTC, and now by Century Arms International, who flew the BRITISH FLAG over that building, until Peter Kawaja wrote and distributed a document about them. Please check out their background and ties to CIA and British MI-6.

* The city of Boca Raton Water Utilities have admitted that they have been performing periodic water sample tests from the plant area after all these years, and they went into the plant several years ago and poured cement down drains. The sworn affidavit by federal agents prove that warfare-grade "free" cyanide was dumped into the city's water supply, and they knew this since 1990 but kept this secret from the citizens of Boca Raton. Kawaja has received phone calls and inquiries from people who claim to live and work south of the PIT plant who either have or know of persons now in hospitals, "brain-dead" and DYING FROM CANCER.

* The Drs. Garth & Nancy Nicolson, both Ph.D.s, have published their report in JAMA and featured in CRIMINAL POLITICS MAGAZINE, wherein they describe how Dr. Nancy Nicolson almost died from Gulf War Illness; their cat also contracted this "disease" from their daughter-in-law, a Gulf veteran. They have made the tie also with George Bush/James Baker III et al., to biological weapons, genetically engineered/man-made, identified as Mycoplasma incognitus, one of the GWI "Syndromes" found in Desert Storm veterans. This warfare agent was being tested on death row prison inmates at Huntsville Prison, Texas. 350 prison employees came down with GWI in an OUTBREAK. ARMED DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE AGENTS entered the MD ANDERSON CANCER CENTER, and threatened the administration not to allow the Nicolson's to continue their research on GWI, nor to allow them to talk about it publicly. This is again, the same government, the same DOD/VA who denies GWI, states they want to help our veterans, yet denies them treatment, allowing thousands of America to die.

* The VA “hard” files (evidence) on GWI were moved to the Murrah Building (the Oklahoma Federal Building), and conveniently (er—accidentally/unfortunately) were destroyed in that bombing.

* The DOD “now” claims some of the NBC (centcom) Logs were accidentally destroyed.

* GWI is a Communicable Disease, spreading worse than AIDS, by mere casual contact, through perspiration, or by being close to someone who coughs. You can become infected by brushing by someone at a store. Your children can be infected at a playground or at school. Mycoplasma incognitus contains most of the HIV (AIDS) envelope, which was tampered with by humans. It is a warfare agent BY DESIGN. Our government is involved in this great crime and cover-up. A nationwide/worldwide panic is going to be created, of such magnitude, that it will threaten our very existence. This same government will then step in to offer a solution; they will have “an antidote”, a treatment, BUT, only those who will accept the medical ID will be treated, all others will be considered a danger and threat to society, hunted down, and imprisoned or killed. Americans will welcome this solution, will turn in their neighbors and friends in order to survive themselves. At the same time, this instrument WILL SUSPEND THE CONSTITUTION OF THESE UNITED STATES, to allow United Nations Rule, the New World Order/One World Government.

AMERICA WILL BE ENSLAVED

* Approximately 40% (from confidential sources) of the American population is already a CARRIER of one form (or another) of HIV, as there are now over 2,000+ strains, effectively making almost half of the population a carrier to infect others of (example) Ebola Reston, a slow acting DEADLY AGENT, taking years to manifest itself, killing you in pain and worse than Ebola Zaire, which is quick acting.

The government is already leaking news stories through the mainstream media, warning America: it is not IF, but WHEN, we will soon face a WORLDWIDE OUTBREAK. They are preparing you for what they already know and have planned. What they are saying however, is that this will happen by accident, because of international air travel, and Americans are believing that.

It is not by an accident of nature or deforestation, it is by DESIGN AND IT IS HERE.

IRAQ ADMITS TO LARGER GERM WARFARE ARSENAL

by Barbara Crossette
The New York Times

UNITED NATIONS—Iraq has told the head of a U.N. inspection team that its germ warfare program was larger and more advanced than it had previously admitted, including bombs and scud missiles armed with lethal biological agents, officials of the team said Tuesday.

In weekend meetings with the U.N. official, Rolf Ekeus, the Iraqis provided new details of stockpiles of germ weapons that included substantial quantities of anthrax, botulin and other agents.

The government of President Saddam Hussein also admitted that, contrary to earlier assertions, the biological agents and weapons were not destroyed before the start of the Persian Gulf War in 1991, according to Charles Duelfer, Ekeus' deputy.

Iraqi officials, who in July said their biological agents had been destroyed in the fall of 1990, now say that they eliminated the stockpiles after the conflict, Duelfer said in an interview here Tuesday.

But some diplomats and officials say they are concerned that Iraq may still have biological weapons stored at secret sites.

Although Iraq had previously confessed to having both toxic agents and warheads had been armed indicated the weapons were much closer to being used than previously known.

“Now they admit that these types of agents have been put on ammunition, including missile warheads, on bombs, and this is, of course, a major admission.” Ekeus told reporters after his visit to Iraq, “That means also that the Iraqi advanced.”

Duelfer described the Iraqi biological weapons program as “very significant, advanced and mature and a threat to the region.

Officials say they do not have enough information to be certain why Iraq did not use its biological arms during the war, but suspect that the Hussein government feared a huge retaliatory response by the United States and its allies. During the war Iraq hit Israel with missiles armed with conventional explosives.

In recent days Baghdad has also provided substantial new information on its nuclear weapons program, a spokesman for the International Atomic Energy Agency said in Vienna Tuesday. The agency has its own inspector, Maurizio Zifferero, working on Iraq. He has been in Baghdad with Ekeus.

A Western diplomat said the new information includes confirmation that Iraq was continuing research into the nuclear fuel cycle, apparently trying to enrich uranium for weapons.

The new admissions by the Iraq government were apparently prompted by the defection to Jordan earlier this month of a son-in-law of the president, Lt. Gen. Hussein Kamel Hassan, who had been responsible for developing Iraq's weapons of mass destruction. Officials say that the Iraqis appeared to want to pre-empt Kamel, who Ekeus met Tuesday in Amman, where he was given asylum on Aug. 8.

By revealing information that Kamel was likely to provide anyway, Iraq may hope to win favor for being forthcoming, and thus advance Saddam's campaign to end international sanctions against his country.

Ekeus, whose judgment of Iraq's candor would be influential, said the disclosures were a step toward lifting the sanctions. "We see a new language in Baghdad during our visit," he said. "How deep it is and how sustainable that, policy will be, that is still, of course, open for judgment.

SENATOR DOLE'S SECRET
ADL/MISHPUCKA CONNECTION
by Gary Wean 8/21/95

To: Silver State III, Dan Gertsch

From: Gary Wean

Re: The 4-page letter you received from Sen. Robert Dole, a copy of which you sent to me.

[LETTER]:

BOB DOLE

Enclosed is a copy of your Bill of Rights. It protects your ten most basic freedoms.

It is the backbone of justice in America. Judges should follow it to the letter.

But if the liberals running the White House get their way, they will give 340 of their friends lifetime jobs as federal judges.

Do you trust them to put aside their personal views when they enter our courtroom?

My Fellow American,

Do you want 340 of Bill Clinton's close friends making decisions about what's good for you and your family?

Do you trust them to put aside their liberal bias when ruling on everything from crime prevention to taxes to voluntary prayer in schools?

I don't.

And neither do my good friends at the Judicial Selection Monitoring Project (JSMP).

As your Senate Majority Leader, I work closely with JSMP to make sure our courts have judges who rule according to the Bill of Rights rather than their own notions of justice.

Our courts are not the place for liberals who want to act as social workers or judges who believe in the rights of criminals rather than victims.

Think this can't happen? Just look at two Clinton nominees who became judges when the Democrats ran the Senate:

Rosmary Barkett who signed an opinion to overturn the death sentence of a gang leader who sent a grisly audio tape to a mother detailing the murder of her son. Now a federal judge.

Imagine listening to that tape?

H. Lee Sarokin who opposes pre-trial detention of violent criminals, even though 80% of state inmates have previous convictions and 30% of criminals out on bail are re-arrested for other felonies while awaiting trial. Now a federal judge.

Do you want hardened criminals accused of violent crimes in your neighborhood?

Only 846 Federal Judges protect your liberties as defined in the Bill of Rights and the rest of the Constitution.

Shouldn't they follow the laws we have rather than create new ones?

Judges who rule without a political or social bias have been an underpinning of our entire culture. And we could lose this in a court system run by activist judges appointed by Bill Clinton's White House.

That's why I need your help today. You can make sure no more Barketts or Sarokins make it to your federal bench.

How?

By supporting JSMP (Judicial Selection Monitoring Project) with your tax deductible gift of $20, $25, or even $50 today.

This may be the first time you have heard of JSMP, but their work has been a vital resource for the entire Senate for some time.

Their resourceful and efficient staff makes sure the judicial rulings and records of Clinton nominees are not "sanitized" by the White House and ignored by the liberal news media.

These full judicial track records are then hand delivered to every Senator and the news media with protecting your rights in mind.

But, this is not as simple as it sounds.

It can take weeks or months to thoroughly review just one nominee. And right now there is an immediate backlog of 85 vacant judgeships in our federal system. And there are probably 200 more Clinton nominations to review and process over the next 18 months.

With the Senate in session about 38 weeks each year—you can see we are counting on JSMP to help us cover a lot of ground in a short time.

Bill Clinton knows time is short. He is working hard to push as many nominations through the system as he possibly can. He knows he has the raw power to nominate as many as 340 of his friends to lifetime jobs as federal judges—creating the most permanent legacy of his political agenda.

If his handpicked liberal activists slip through our screening process it could subvert the will of the voters, because as judges, they could reject laws and reforms passed by Congress as unconstitutional in their eyes.

JSMP clearly understands this threat and is there to carefully and fairly scrutinize the judicial record of Clinton nominees placed before the Senate.

Presidents, regardless of political party, used to place nominees before the Senate who put the Constitution first and left their personal views at home. But ever since the liberals destroyed Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court they have worked overtime in their bid for a "hostile takeover" of our federal courts.

I cannot let this happen. Which is why I hope you will take this opportunity to make a gift of $20, $25, or even $50 to JSMP today.

Researching the legal background of a nominee can cost $1000 or more. With 85 judgeships vacant already, you can see this work is expensive for JSMP.

For Impartial Justice,

/s/Bob Dole
Senate Majority Leader

P.S. I've sent a copy of the Bill of Rights to you because many of these freedoms are in jeopardy.

Why?

Because Bill Clinton has 85 vacant seats in the federal judicial system that he wants to fill with his activist friends. With hundreds more to come.

Believe me, their vision of America is much different than yours or mine when it comes to crime prevention to taxes to voluntary prayer in school. Our best hope for keeping Bill Clinton's friends from becoming federal judges is to tell the whole truth about their prior judicial records.

That's what JSMP does best. They make sure that his nominees' past judicial rulings and records are not "sanitized" by the White House and ignored by the liberal media. Their real judicial track records are made available to the full Senate and the news media, with you, the American voter, in mind.

I hope you will take this opportunity to send $20, $25, or even $50 to JSMP. Their work is important and I hope they can count on you today.

[END OF LETTER]

Dole starts off his letter by saying to you, “My Fellow American”. Well, right here and now is the time to make Dole’s terrible lies and deception clear—lies that in his arrogance he does not even hesitate to put in writing.

First, Senator Dole, the Senate Majority Leader is not a fellow American.

Robert Dole is, and has been for many years, a secret, paid agent of the ADL Mishpucka, a sneak saboteur and provocateur who sinisterly uses his high office to treasonously take deadly actions to destroy America and to grievously harm American citizens.

On the first page of his letter Dole talks of his, “good friends at the judicial Selection Monitoring Project (JSMP)”.

Dole further states, “as your Senate Majority Leader, I work closely with JSMP”, etc., etc. Well, the JSMP is an ADL Mishpucka organization that gets its orders direct from Israel. The JSMP is a special project of the phony “Free Congress Foundation” which is a 501(c)3 tax exempt, so-called “non-profit” organization. JSMP and the Free Congress Foundation are just two more of the thousands of ADL Mishpucka outfits like the phony Simon Weisenthal (Holocaust) Center which is also operating under the tax-exempt 501(c)3 “non-profit” racket. The Simon Weisenthal scam under the operation of a ratty little Rabbi named Marvin Hier, which just stole another $10 million from the taxpayers with Sen. Dole’s help. Remember in my previous “Notice to the People” I explained how this mentally sick little Jew, Marvin Hier, along with Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, extorted millions of dollars from the Coors Brewery Co. All of these people are ADL Mishpucka gangsters who couldn’t survive without the thievery and connivance of Robert Dole and the rest of the Senators.

Still on page one of Dole’s letter he states, “As your Senate Majority Leader, I work closely with JSMP to make sure our courts have judges who rule according to the Bill of Rights”, etc., etc. Dole continues by saying, “Just look at two Clinton nominees who became judges when the Democrats ran the Senate.”

Dole’s above statement is the proof, as if we needed more proof, that there is no difference between the crooked Democrat Party and the crooked Republican Party.

As we go to page two of Dole’s letter, he mentions the judicial depredations of two of Clinton’s ADL Mishpucka buddies, lawyers who Clinton appointed to the Federal bench, H. Lee Sarokin and Rosemary Barkett.

With this, Dole makes a plea for the American citizens to reach into heir pockets and pull forth more money to support these slime-ball ADL Mishpuckas in the JSMP.

Then, adding more insult to the citizens, Dole says, “The work of the JSMP has been a vital resource for the entire Senate for some time.”

Read page three of Dole’s letter several times and think very carefully about all his clever duplicity until you get down to the part where he says, “Ever since the liberals destroyed Judge Robert Bork’s nomination to the Supreme Court, they have worked overtime in their bid for a ‘hostile take-over’ of our federal courts.”

At this point Dole again exhorts the bleeding taxpayers to make a cash gift to the scum operating the JSMP. Dole pleads, please send the JSMP your money today.

Senator Robert Dole then signs his letter, “For Impartial Justice, Bob Dole, Senate Majority Leader”.

But there is more, below his signature Dole once again implores the suffering, out-of-work citizens to send money to the ADL Mishpucka’s JSMP scam.

In his letter, Robert Dole talks of the “liberals” bid for a hostile take-over of our federal courts.

But this is more of Dole’s clever lies. He knows the federal courts have been taken over by his brother-ADL Mishpucka agents years ago.

In 1985, the ADL Mishpucka ordered President Reagan to appoint and the Senate to confirm Alex Kozinsky to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal. Alex Kozinsky is one of the most evil, vicious, anti-American Jew thugs from Russia to get on the federal bench since Jimmy Carter appointed Stephen Reinhardt to the Ninth Circuit Court.

In 1985, honest loyal citizens all over the United States did everything in their power possible to advise the U.S. Senate of Kozinsky’s evil, treasonous judicial acts and to prevent him from being confirmed.

Loyal federal employees came forward and testified to Kozinsky’s crimes knowing that they were jeopardizing their jobs and their careers.

With Senator Robert Dole backing Kozinsky along with other Senators who call themselves conservatives, Kozinsky was confirmed. He immediately caused revenge to be taken on the loyal federal employees who had opposed him.

My book, There’s a Fish in the Courthouse, which took 25 years to write and which covers a period of political and judicial corruption dating from January 1946, when I joined the L.A.P.D. until 1987, when my book was printed.

In 1987, along with an associate, I traveled to Washington, D.C. and, at that time, I personally hand delivered a copy of my book and a Petition to each and every one of the 100 U.S. Senators, Robert Dole being one of them. The Petition was from the people pleading with the U.S. Senate to investigate judicial corruption in the Ninth Circuit and to protect the people from gangster judges who were involved in every crime from murder, mayhem, stealing the people’s property, drugs, etc., etc.

At that time, 1987, Senator Robert Dole engaged in and involved himself along with all the other 99 Senators in covering up the evidence and facts of judicial corruption. Regardless of Dole’s pathetic lies in his letter and overt acts to deceive the people, it matters not if judicial nominees are Clinton liberals or Dole conservatives.

Regarding the Presidential election coming soon, the choice for the people is obvious—not a single one of the Republican politicians dying to become the next president can be considered under any circumstances.

Only Buchanan could be considered a choice if he swears in a platform address to the people under the most dire of oaths that he will rid the country of NAFTA, GATT, Federal Reserve, IRS, clean out the Department of Justice, and investigate and remove all federal and state judges who have failed to protect the people's rights and liberties as defined in the Bill of Rights and the rest of the Constitution.

If Buchanan fails to swear to this platform in the very near future the people must search for a person—someone whose name has never before even been heard—someone who can give the people confidence and someone who will swear to commence the above actions within hours after he has been sworn to the presidency and who will never cease until the above demands and more have been completed.

In this communication, I have included pages 628, 629, and 630 from my book [see next column]. The third paragraph of page 628 deals with Alex Kozinsky, who under no circumstances should have ever been considered for office of any kind in the U.S. Government.

These sentences on these pages were written over ten years ago, but it can be plainly seen that the quickening drum-beats of murderous events are marching America ever more swiftly to that point of destruction planned by the ADL Mishpuckas.

A horrendous tidal wave of political and judicial corruption, treachery, and treason is about to sweep away every vestige of Americanism. The last paragraph of page 630 holds true after ten years; I don't know who the small group of loyal Senators are, but Robert Dole is not one of them.

And if there is indeed a small group of loyal Senators still holding fast for America, they had better stand and make themselves known very shortly. Our country desperately waits for an American hero to arise, as one has always done in time of terrible despair and danger.

August 21, 1995

...screaming for trade and economic sanctions against them. A massive plot to crucify Pretoria by wiping out millions in trade and monetary investments with the city of Los Angeles is underway by Councilman Joel Wachs. All over the world in financial centers the pattern is the same.

L.A. City Councilman Joel Wachs screeches out his concern for Black people in a country six-thousand miles distant. His motives are sinister; in Watts, a Black ghetto several blocks south of City Hall, Wachs does nothing for them. A vicious AIDS-driven homo, Wachs is wed to another Mishpucka councilman. Out of his closet, Joel is insolent; he flaunts his life-style. Thereby hangs the tale: a group of ten Harvard University scientists working at New England Regional Primate Research Center, in Southborough, Mass. discovered under their electron microscopes a virus in blood cells of Rhesus monkeys identical to human AIDS. With identical deadliness, it kills monkeys and humans. With their microscopes laying bare the killer virus, the scientists note: “The Rhesus monkeys dying from the immune-deficiency syndrome formerly lived in group cages where both heterosexual and homosexual relations and the eating of feces and spraying of urine were frequent.” The scientists were appalled, reluctant to admit that the world faced an epidemic, millions of corpses laying in the streets. Not even the terrible bubonic plague of the Middle Ages matched the terror of this. They had discovered that gays weren't gay, they were shit-eaters, a deadly mass incubator, spreaders of a killer virus, for which there is no cure.

Chaos...! Chaos...! From every conceivable direction, the American industry is being attacked and destroyed by the international trade conspiracy. Dancing to the Mishpucka's tugs on his strings, President Reagan cons the people: “Low priced imported shoes are saving the American people millions of dollars.” This clever glib coming while our American factories close and thousands of people are put out of work. Israeli-made shoes have captured over seventy percent of the U.S. market because Israeli can make shoes cheaper. Reagan sends them billions of taxpayers dollars to do it. Reagan commits even more deadly chaotic insanity with his nomination of Mishpucka Alex Kozinsky to a lifetime appointment to the Federal Appeals Court in San Francisco. A thirty-five-year-old Jew born in Russia, Kozinsky mysteriously became a lawyer for President Reagan and a law clerk to Chief Justice Warren Burger. This treasonous Mishpucka actually ghost-wrote critical decisions that were made by the Chief Justice of the United States.

Absurdly, Kozinsky became Chief Judge of the U.S. Claims Court, and there, the treasonous agent provocateur sabotaged and thwarted criminal investigations into military waste and procurement frauds. He then conspired to destroy the federal employees who had exposed frauds against the U.S. Because of Kozinsky's treasonous acts against America, two watch-dog groups and the Government Accountability Project, along with the Federal employees demanded that the Senate investigate into this Israeli saboteur's corruption and treason.

Former Dep. Special Counsel of the United States Claims Court, Jessie James, accused Kozinsky of making outright, absolute lies and statements to the Judiciary Committee at his confirmation hearing, May 17, 1985. But all this had no effect, understandably, the head of the Judiciary Committee is the traitorous Senator Strom Thurmond, who covered up the machine-gun crime for Pres. Reagan's National Security Director, William P. Clark. Then Senator Thurmond, aided and abetted by two cowardly Senators on the committee, ramroded through Pres. Reagan's appointment of Alex Kozinsky, a treasonous Mishpucka from Russia.

Senators Paul Simon (Illinois) and Dennis De Concini (Arizona), admitted their betrayal of America to the news media: Simon stated, “Frankly I feel some un-ease with this nomination, but I do not have a basis to vote against it.” And de Concini stated, “After all of those accusations made against him I feel some uneasiness about this Alex Kozinsky.” Then attempting to cover his betrayal, De Concini came on with some sick slop: “I hope that Kozinsky will hear these words and that he will moderate his temperament and manners that he has exhibited in the past.” Lord, what more had the Senators needed!

The Mishpucka strategy never changes. Gov. Dukmejian's Annual Report to the Legislature regarding Organized Crime in California is a lengthy document prepared by Attorney General Van de Kamps' Bureau of Organized Crime and Civil Intelligence. The report uses the same old worn-out Mishpucka propaganda they used on Carlos Marcello; they called him, “The King of the New Orleans Mafia”. All they need is an Italian name—this time it’s a half-assed bookmaker, Peter John Milano. In the report, Milano is labeled “The new Boss of Southern California’s Crime Family”. The dumb dago loves all the notoriety—eating it up. He plays the part just like Marlon Brando. But in the Report there is not a hint of the Mishpucka crime Family.

The Mishpucka chaos nears its peak—assassinations, terrorism and death around the globe, governments on the brink of collapse, world bank catastrophes, and AIDS, an uncontrollable deadly plague: chaos—deadly chaos.

The people have been run, harried like the hare by the hounds, but trapped against a stone wall with no place left to run, even the hare comes out fighting. And this time the hare has recognized his enemy; the “Jews” can manufacture no scapegoat to crouch behind; they have brought their evil down upon themselves.

As Jack Ruby babbled under duress of his horrible guilt, “Jews will die by the millions, they will be killed in the streets.” And President Lyndon Johnson had known the truth; he had stated, “Forty million people will die if the truth is revealed. There were forty-million Jews in America.

Only the United States Senate led by the Constitution is powerful enough to save America. Of one-hundred Senators, the treasonous, corrupt and cowardly will desert their country. The small group that remains will have to stand fast. If not, the people will have no choice; they will take over. The mighty war will be engaged, a Jihad...a Holy War to end Holy Wars...a deadly, bitter struggle to the End... [End of quoting.]

ANIMAL MUTILATIONS: VICTIMS OF TOXIC TECHNOLOGY?

This intriguing article from the August issue of ACRES U.S.A. makes a connection between animal mutilations and crop circles. See what you think, [quoting:]

One of the characteristics of all animal mutilations is a missing tongue deep into the throat. The reproductive organs appear to have been excised or vaporized. Udders are gone. Sometimes the anus appears to be bored out. In many cases the uterus and mammarys are missing, as are the livers, heart—all protein structure. This may take a bit of explaining. Indeed, there is more protein in the tongue and the organs, and we are not required to present too much elaboration to show that there is a direct connection between the organs and high-level protein calculated as nitrogen multiplied by 6.25. Followers of spin theory know that nitrogen is of the negative energy field. Nitrogen is an acid. All negative energy fields spin counterclockwise. The liver, the heart, the tongue—all have a darker color than other parts of the body.

Earlier articles we put forth concluded that a crop circle is nothing more than the spinning out of a positive field to the left and a negative field to the right, therefore, if the energy field present is a negative energy field, then everything in the negative energy field—which protein is—would spin out of the animal trapped in a forming circle. Thus the tongue, the liver, reproductive organs (including the udders or mammarys) all fall into the same categories.

There is no evidence that anyone took the missing tissue or bone or blood. Most likely radiation-accelerated destruction simply vaporized the animal material. [Leonard] Rizdon and [T.J.] Mahoney postulate that if one created an explosion, then imposed above the explosion a canopy of sufficient structure to force the initial explosion back to its point of origin, the result would be nuclear-accelerated particle disintegration. The story thus comes full circle to the Acres U.S.A. proposition that using chemicals of organic synthesis with reckless abandon for eventual ionization is playing not with dynamite, but with atomic reaction material. ### VACATION CONNECTIONS: CLINTONS ROUGH IT AT ROCKEFELLER ESTATE

From the August 14 issue of the ALBUQUERQUE JOURNAL, [quoting:]

President Clinton and his wife, Hillary, waved goodbye to well-wishers Tuesday and left the White House for a two-week vacation of golf, hiking and horseback riding in Wyoming. The Clintons will spend their vacation at a Rockefeller family estate in a valley with a stunning view of the Grand Teton Mountains. [Don't you find that just a bit interesting? As you may recall, it has been rumored that Bill is a bastard Rockefeller child.]

JUSTICES HEAD FOR EUROPE
ALL EXPENSES PAID

This article by Paul M. Barrett appeared in the August 14 issue of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, [quoting:]

During the high court's long summer recess, from July through late September, some members of the court make Europe their regular destination, with U.S. law schools often picking up the tab. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy moonlights for part of the summer as a law professor. Each July, Justice Kennedy and his wife, Mary, spend three weeks in Salzburg, with all major expenses and a $20,000 stipend paid by a Sacramento, Calif., law school called McGeorge, which runs a summer session here. [McGeorge?]

The high court finished on June 29, and on July 1 Chief Justice Rehnquist was in England to see Andre Agassi and Boris Becker [play tennis at Wimbledon]. Then he headed off to Cambridge, where he lectured on the history of the court, toured cathedrals and war memorials, and was feted by British lords and ladies. [A bit of a royalist, eh?] Tulane Law School in New Orleans and Valparaiso Law School in Valparaiso, Ind., sponsors of summer sessions at Cambridge, split the chief justice's travel and accommodations costs.

Justice Antonin Scalia, meanwhile, jetted to the French Riviera. Hosted by Hofstra University School of Law, Hempstead, N.Y., which paid his expenses, he gave talks in Nice on the Constitution and popped up at posh parties in Cannes and Monaco, where he had cocktails with Prince Albert. [How cozy.] Justice Stephen Breyer spend two weeks in Barcelona, courtesy of the University of Puerto Rico. And Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg sampled the fare at outdoor beer gardens in cozy Innsbruck, Austria, where she was the star attraction and keynote speaker at a summer session organized by St. Mary's University of San Antonio, Texas, which paid her expenses.

Properly disclosed in annual financial reports, these summer journeys by the justices don't run afoul of any ethical or legal constraints on perks. [Interesting how these allegedly stalwart defenders of the Constitution of the United States of America head back to the "Old Country" as soon as the recess bell rings. And what did YOU do on YOUR summer vacation?]

PAWNS IN THE PLAY:
HARRY WU HOME—HILLARY
TO BEIJING

Chinese-American Harry Wu's exposé, his arrest, conviction, and release from China are juxtaposed against the U.N.'s Fourth World Conference on Women to be held in Beijing early in September. Here are some media snippets:

From the August 25 issue of THE DAILY NEWS, [quoting:]

China's expulsion of Harry Wu is the first good news in months for the dangerously deteriorating relationship between Washington and Beijing, and it opens the way for Hillary Rodham Clinton to travel to an international women's conference in Beijing next month. Clinton can hardly refuse to attend the conference, experts on China say, now that China has made what amounts to a goodwill overture to the United States. [Of course, Hillary has been chomping at the bit to head up the American delegation.]

From the August 24 issue of THE DAILY NEWS, [quoting:]

Wu was convicted of spying, posing as a government worker and illegally buying, obtaining, and providing state secrets to foreigners, Xinhua reported. The crimes of spying and leaking state secrets are punishable by death. Wu, a U.S. citizen, was dedicated to exposing China's extensive penal colonies. He emigrated in 1985 after serving 19 years in labor camps for criticizing the Communist Party. He returned to China several times, posing variously as a businessman, a worker from Shanghai visiting camp guard friends or a Chinese policeman, to document forced prison labor and the use of organs from executed prisoners in transplants. Wu was well-known in Washington as a frequent witness at congressional hearings of Chinese human rights. His testimony helped alert customs officials to the import of Chinese goods produced by prison labor, a violation of U.S. law.

From the August issue of FOCUS ON THE FAMILY, [quoting:]

From August 30 to Sept. 15, 1995, delegates from more than 170 sovereign nations will attend the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing, China. It will represent the most radical, atheistic, and anti-family crusade in the history of the world, and your own government is pulling the strings and supporting a disproportionate share of the costs. The extremists who are preparing for and promoting this conference are a million miles outside the American mainstream, and yet they will be speaking in Beijing with the authority of the United States Government.

First, consider where this international event will be held. No country on Earth has abused and oppressed more women than China, with its forced abortion policy and its "one child per family" law. This is a nation that monitors menstrual cycles so it can identify young women with unapproved pregnancies and drag them into medical clinics to have their babies killed. It is also a country that has murdered tens of millions of female infants. So effective has been its bias against the feminine gender that the sex-ratio in large regions of China favors males by 64 percent. What irony, then that the people who have annihilated their little girls will host a conference on the betterment of women. What breathtaking wickedness! Sending a delegation to China should be unthinkable for two other reasons. A half-dozen witnesses testified that the Chinese government is satisfying its need for hard cash by executing young prisoners and then "harvesting" their organs while their bodies are still warm. Sue Lloyd-Roberts, a BBC reporter [clue] and Harry Wu, who spent 19 years in China's forced labor camps, showed the senators a shocking videotape of the actual executions.

If that isn't enough to turn one's stomach, consider this: According to World, human fetuses have begun to appear on menus of Chinese restaurants as a delicacy and health tonic. It is incredible that the Clinton Administration has not only approved U.S. support for a conference on women's rights in such a country, but it has also granted “most favored nation” trade status to it as well. According to the President, there is no connection between China’s abuse of human rights and our economic policies. All that matters, apparently, is that we profit financially from the relationship. [Keep in mind that China is one of the factions in the international power game, and China-bashing and the destabilization of Asia are favorite tactics of the British intelligence kingpins. Not that all this stuff isn’t very likely true. It’s just convenient to focus on the sins of China and avoid the even worse travesties committed by the likes of, say, the Tavistock Institute. As for the U.N. Conference itself, according to this article, 5 items form the basis for the “politically correct” agenda of the conference: hostility to the institution of marriage, gender feminism (50/50 quotas and elimination of gender identity), population control measures (“safe” sex and abortion rights), homosexual and lesbian rights, and condemnation of religion. This conference is not simply a gabfest cackleberry party. It lays the groundwork for the upcoming, soon-to-be-in-YOUR-neighborhood, New World Order.]

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE KNEW ABOUT SLAVE LABOR IN U.S.

Have you noticed that everything you buy these days says either “Made in China” (slave labor camps documented by Harry Wu) or “Hecho en Mexico” (outgrowth of NAFTA). The next two articles reveal a network of “sweatshops” here in the U.S. The first comes from an AP article found in the August 5 issue of the MODESTO BEE, [quoting:]

EL MONTE—As five dozen garment workers slaved inside a prisonlike apartment complex, federal authorities failed to take action for three years even though they knew of the sweatshop. Immigration and Naturalization Service authorities acknowledged they took no action until state officials received a similar tip six weeks ago. A woman who escaped through the air-conditioning duct of the El Monte apartment complex informed state authorities about the conditions at the sweatshop. Some of the Thai-born laborers told of 17-hour days inside the garment factory, circled by barbed wire. “I was told I could come here and make a lot of money sewing in the United States,” Vuttiphong Vutthiboompronsak said through an interpreter. “There are some who tried to escape, but they were caught and sent back to Thailand.”

The workers sewed women’s ready-to-wear garments, some of which ended up in East Coast department stores.... Retailers may have legitimately purchased the garments from manufacturers, who in turn had subcontracted with shops that subcontracted with the El Monte operation.

Speaking of corruption, this article from a recent issue of the FEDERAL TIMES tells of sex, drugs, and bribery in the Customs Service, [quoting:]

A former Customs Service employee who has waited years for grand jury investigation into the agency’s San Diego district has finally gotten his way. A grand jury in Sand Diego is hearing testimony on allegations that eight Customs officials here accepted bribes or sexual favors in return for helping Mexican cartels smuggle cocaine into the United States. The investigation is the culmination of numerous government inquiries that began in 1990 when Michael Horner, then a Customs inspector in San Diego, reported what he believes was internal corruption. The grand jury is investigating eight current or former employees including administrators, supervisors, an internal affairs officer and an enforcement agent, according to news reports from San Diego. Investigations into the allegations have been conducted by Customs internal affairs [damage control], the Treasury Department inspector general and a congressional committee [in other words, probably bigger crooks than the alleged crooks!], said Bobbie Cassidy, a Customs spokeswoman in San Diego. No charges came out of the investigations. [Reminiscent of the “official” investigations of government involvement in “Waco” and “Oklahoma City” and Gulf War Syndrome.]

The focus of the investigation is reportedly a program known as “line release” that allows companies believed to be of little risk to ship goods into the United States with little or no inspection. The allegations say at least one employee cooperated with drug traffickers in return for sexual liaisons with boys in Mexican border towns and that others accepted money to cover up smuggling. Customs employees also are accused of allowing Mexican customs officers caught with drugs, undeclared U.S. currency and a stolen vehicle to go free.

NEVER A DULL MOMENT IN THE MIDDLE EAST

Disinformation and continual chaos seem to be the goals for the Middle East. Marjorie Miller reports in the August 22 issue of THE LOS ANGELES TIMES, [quoting:]

JERUSALEM—Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin [British Intelligence Zionist] vowed Monday to continue peace talks with the Palestinians as the Islamic extremist group Hamas [creation of British Intelligence] claimed responsibility for a morning rush-hour bus bombing that left five people dead and 108 injured...part of a violent campaign to end peace negotiations between Rabin and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat [British Intelligence robotoid or double]. “This is a hard and painful day, but we are determined to fight the Hamas and Islamic Jihad (another militant group) terrorism and to continue to build peace [by THEIR definition: no opposition] with the Palestinians who want peace with us,” Rabin said. Israel and Arafat’s Palestinian Authority are on the verge of an agreement for expanding Palestinian rule in the Israeli-occupied West Bank. Arafat also condemned the suicide bombing.

The attack touched off dozens of angry protests throughout the country by Israelis opposed to giving up West Bank land to Palestinians. Hamas and Islamic Jihad consider the peace agreement a sellout of their goals of establishing an Islamic state in a Palestinian homeland that covers what is now Israel. [So Rabin comes out smelling like the proverbial rose. Can he help it if his attempts to create peace seem to be thwarted at every turn?]

NEW EUTHANASIA FACTORY CAUSES ALARM IN AUSTRALIA

This article comes from the August issue of THE STRATEGY, [quoting:]

Although everything appears to be going O.K. for the globalists, there is a growing uneasiness among the sheep. One of the things that has raised the alarm is the new euthanasia factory in Darwin. Built to international specifications without prior approval from Australians, it is capable of taking large shipments of humans to consign to “a different level of existence”. I haven’t heard of one single globalist who wanted to visit this “different plane of existence”, as they fondly call it.

So why the great expense and excitement to build a railway at billions of dollars, charged to Australia—which is already broke—from Alice Springs to Darwin? Granted, we already have the cattle boxes to put behind the speedy diesel engines, but why the incredible expense? What’s going on up there?

STREISAND TO RECORD
KOL NIDRE DITTY

From the August 10 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

Barbra Streisand is working on a new album, says People magazine, of “religious and inspirational songs of various denomination”. Among the numbers she will perform is “Kol Nidre”, a religious song traditionally performed during Yom Kippur. [You remember, that’s the ritual that grants Jews permission to lie for the next year without repercussion.]

DIPHTHERIA IN UKRAINE?

From the August 5 issue of the MODESTO BEE, [quoting:]

KIEV, Ukraine—The nation is fighting a growing diphtheria epidemic that has experts wondering what happened to the millions of doses of vaccine Western countries donated last spring. Since January, 2,594 people have contracted the disease and 95 have died, including 27 children. An official said the highest outbreak is in regions that received the most vaccine, including Kiev, Donetsk, and Crimea. Ukrainian officials fear the vaccine may have ended up on the black market. [More likely, it was dispensed by injection to the people!]

WINDOWS 95:
RUMORS OF ON-LINE SPYING

From a recent issue of the SAN JOSE MERCURY NEWS, [quoting:]

It’s the software world’s version of the toothpaste tube with a satanic image, or the bubble gun containing spider eggs: a rumor that won’t seem to die about a bit of malevolence supposedly hiding deep inside Windows 95. The report—repeated for most of the year on the rumor-friendly Internet despite repeated Microsoft denials, even turning up in Australia earlier this week—has it that the installation process for Windows 95 surreptitiously searches through an owner’s hard drive and those of other computers on a network, and then sends a complete report about what it finds to Microsoft’s Redmond, Wash., headquarters.

One version of the rumor, consistently denied by Microsoft, had it that the Registration Wizard sent the serial numbers of the programs it finds so that Microsoft could crack down on pirated copies of its software. Even if demonstrably false, the rumors about the snooping software have been a PR headache for Microsoft. Some companies, for example, have balked initially at installing Windows 95 for fear that competitive information would end up in Microsoft’s hands. And earlier this week, there were reports that the Australian Navy was investigating the program, believing it might lead to security violations.

L.A. CITY COUNCIL DETERMINED TO FLUORIDATE OVER CITIZENS' OBJECTIONS

Here is another classic Machiavellian maneuver: If a tactic meets resistance, back off, wait a bit, then dust it off and try again. Persistence always pays off. This article by Rick Orlov comes from the August 24 issue of THE DAILY NEWS, [quoting:]

The Los Angeles City Council on Wednesday ordered the DWP to study fluoridating the city's water supply to help prevent tooth decay. Decades ago, a group of anti-fluoride protesters argued the plan was a Communist-inspired conspiracy to destroy Americans' health. Mounting a well-organized campaign that involved picketing throughout the city, the group in 1966 was key in convincing the council to reject the idea.

Since then, the National Research Council has released a report concluding fluoridation is safe. [As if that made it so!] The research council further estimated last year that about 55 percent of Americans have used fluoridated water without any ill effects [How would they recognize an ill effect as being fluoride-related?] and that it has helped prevent tooth decay.

Councilwoman Ruth Galanter said she hopes the issue is no longer an emotional topic—as it was during the 1950s and '60s when it provoked widespread fears and anxiety in the city—and instead will be considered for its health benefits. [When concerned citizens stand in opposition to government, they are considered irrational and emotional.] “I can assure you that neither I nor the American Dental Association are Communists,” Galanter joked after the meeting. [Ha ha ha.]

WORLD BANK WARNS OF WATER CRISIS

What does the World Bank have to do with water? This article comes from the HARRISON (Arkansas) DAILY TIMES, [quoting:]

WASHINGTON (AP)—Unless current trends are reversed, the Earth will have a worsening water crisis, the World Bank warns. We are warning the world that there is a huge problem looming out there,” Ismail Serageldin, a bank vice president, said as the bank released a report on the world's water Sunday. “The water problem in most countries stems not from a shortage of water but rather from its inefficient and unsustainable use,” Serageldin said. “We need to change our attitudes toward water and stop wasting it the way we do.” Global demand for water, which has historically increased at a rate of 2.3 percent a year, doubling every 21 years, must be slowed, the paper said. It recommended that the problem be addressed by establishing associations of river and lake users to manage water, and by selling water at prices high enough to encourage conservation. [More control! And water is a survival commodity. It's amazing how the words “global” and “world” show up with ever greater frequency in the media—have you noticed?]

JERRY GARCIA OF GRATEFUL DEAD: MK-ULTRA DRUG VICTIM

This article by Jeffrey Steinberg comes from the August 21 issue of THE NEW FEDERALIST, [quoting:]

The August 9th death, at the age of 53, of Jerry Garcia of the psychedelic rock band the Grateful Dead, provoked public statements of mourning by the President of the United States, by a former chairman of the Senate Intelligence Oversight Committee, and by scores of other prominent figures from public life. Newsweek magazine devoted the cover story of its Aug. 21 issue to Garcia's "strange trip", and the "politically correct" Style Section of Katharine Graham's Washington Post devoted two full pages to the singer-songwriter-guitarist—in addition to a front-page article in the same issue.

But none of the published accounts of Garcia's life made mention of one crucial, deadly fact: Garcia was an unwitting human guinea-pig in British Intelligence and the CIA's secret war against America, known as MK-ULTRA. It was through MK-ULTRA that Garcia was first hooked on LSD-25, the psychedelic drug that was at the center of the CIA's secret Cold War experimentation in mass mind control.

After dropping out of high school at age 15, Garcia joined the U.S. Army and was soon dishonorably discharged. He wound up at the Veterans Hospital in Palo Alto, Calif., which was then run by Dr. Gregory Bateson, an intimate of Aldous Huxley and Dr. Humphrey Osmond, both Britishers who were gurus of the CIA's secret LSD program. Bateson's VA Hospital was one of the government hospitals where the MK-ULTRA program was conducted—unbeknownst to its victims—and it was there that both Garcia and Ken Kesey were administered repeated doses of LSD. Kesey received his first LSD at Palo Alto in 1959!

Kesey then became the best-known propagandist for LSD, touring the United States with a collection of druggies known as the "Merry Pranksters" and handing out countless free doses of CIA-manufactured LSD. Kesey sponsored a series of free rock music concerts known as "acid tests", at which thousands of doses of the CIA's psychedelic drug were passed out to the unsuspecting crowd. It was at Kesey's "acid tests" that Garcia and his band—formerly known as the Warlocks [too obvious!? ]—got their start.

The propaganda push for Kesey's so-called "Summer of Love" was instrumental in the launching of the drug-rock-sex counterculture that has had such a devastating impact on American culture and morality. And every step along the way, it was top-ranking members of the British Establishment who orchestrated the process.

In Garcia's case, his use of LSD and marijuana, under the initial sponsorship of the CIA and its British Intelligence "cousins", soon led him to other lethal drugs. He developed a heroin addiction which was later compounded by cocaine addiction. In 1986, he nearly died during a concert at RFK stadium in Washington, D.C. At the time of his death, apparently of a heart attack, Garcia was in a private hospital in Northern California attempting to overcome his drug addiction. [Notice how the “hospital” is never mentioned by name. After reading Cathy O’Brien’s personal MK-ULTRA accounts—especially this week’s exposé of the center in Lampe, Missouri, one begins to read a bit closer between the lines.] Rather than being lionized as a cultural icon, Garcia should be mourned as yet another victim of Britain’s Opium War against America.

BUREAUCRATS BLOCK CANCER CURES

This article by George W. Kell comes from the August 10 issue of THE MODESTO BEE, [quoting:]

The recent Viewpoints essay of William P. Cheshire of the Arizona Republic (“Blaming the government”) describes several instances of law enforcement abuses in noting that the people have lost faith in the federal government. But people distrust government for reasons closer to home than he describes.

Some 60 percent distrust government because they know their health, even their lives, are threatened by bureaucrats who have prostituted themselves to monopolistic drug companies and food processors.

Nutritional remedies make toxic drugs irrelevant, and thereby impair the market share of the bloated drug monopolists. So they have methods of controlling these challenges. I will cite only one example:

Section 1707.1 of California’s Health and Safety Code makes it unlawful for anyone to utilize any substance (including vitamins) for the “diagnosis, treatment, alleviation or cure of cancer”, unless that substance has been approved by the regulators. Don’t speculate that prosecutors won’t charge a doctor with an offense under this section if he actually has a “cure”! They do, and repeatedly. The result is, of course, to suppress the remedy.

The courts uphold this on the theory that if someone really has a cure for cancer “all he has to do is apply for approval.” But it’s not that simple. Approval can only come in one of two ways: First, application as a “new drug” can be made to the FDA—a process that entails expenditure of over $100,000,000. Who besides the drug monopoly has that kind of money? Second, application can be made with the state “Cancer Advisory Council”. This “unbiased body” consists of 15 stooges of the drug industry, nine of whom are practicing oncologists whose main interest is to protect their turf. [A tried and true technique—stacking the deck!]

Over the years we have seen the suppression of numerous remedies for cancer—Krebiozin, Laetrile, Tahebo and Aqua del Sol, to name but a few. A little more than 20 years ago one out of five of us could expect to contract cancer in his or her lifetime. Today it is one in three. By the year 2000 it will be one out of two. Don’t look at me. I have already had mine, and won (in Mexico [rapidly being ruled out thanks to NAFTA]), because I knew better than to trust this system.

AIR EXPLOSIVES WERE THE REAL THING

Christopher Quinn wrote this article for the August 22 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:] Two claylike bars that a Gainesville professor found in his suitcase Friday at Orlando International Airport were bricks of the military explosive C-4, not some benign substance as described by federal officials. For three days, the Federal Aviation Administration and the FBI released statements implying that the bricks were not explosives. Yet Orlando munitions experts detonated a piece of the material and determined the bars were C-4 within hours of their discovery, four sources involved in the investigation told The Orlando Sentinel. [You mean our own government would DECEIVE us? What an idea!—sounds like lunatic-fringe, right-wing radical conspiratology, to me!]

The bricks arrived in Orlando as the result of a security test gone awry. Netherlands police, checking the accuracy of bomb-detecting measures at Schiphol Airport in Amsterdam, have admitted to putting C-4 into professor Paul Holloway's suitcase after choosing it at random. The Dutch officers, who conduct such tests regularly, forgot to retrieve the C-4 before Holloway's bag left the airport. [There are at least three items in this paragraph that don't quite ring true! What do you think?]

Marty Salsen, senior vice president of the International Airline Passengers Association, said, "You would have to think this is a mistake. I know in the United States, this would not occur. They would never use a real passenger as a carrier or a guinea pig." [Time to grow up, Marty, and maybe start by reading the NEXT article!]

HUMAN RADIATION EXPERIMENTS IN MASSACHUSETTS

Scott Allen is the author of this article that appeared in the August 18 issue of the BOSTON GLOBE, [quoting:]

The federal government helped pay for human radiation experiments in Massachusetts over the past 40 years, according to documents released yesterday, including newly disclosed tests on fetuses before they were aborted and a kidney transplant patient who died from the radiation exposure. The experiments were among 435 federally backed radiation projects involving 16,000 people described in a new Department of Energy report, the result of 18 months of digging through archives. [I'll spare you the grim details of the experiments.]

G (L) O (B) A L S 2000: PARENTS READ BETWEEN THE LINES

The next article, by Rochelle Sharpe, appeared in the August 30 issue of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL. You may recall that GOALS 2000, brain child of MK-ULTRA perpeTraitor William S. Bennett was mentioned in Cathy O'Brien's writing on Monarch mind control (CONTACT, 3/7/95), [quoting:]

In the shadow of the New Hampshire Capitol last summer, concerned parents began weekly meetings to detect any hidden agenda behind Goals 2000, the federal government's latest effort to improve education [It seems safe to surmise that the Elite's definition of "education" is "NWO brain washing".] Suspicious of claims that the national reform plan was voluntary, they scrutinized the new law as if it were an arcane text. When they uncovered words they viewed as synonymous with mandatory—including 195 uses of "shall", 63 of "will", 33 of "require", and 13 of "must"—they became more wary.

"It's like joining the army," David Wheeler, a Republican state senator, later complained, "You can voluntarily join, but once you're in, you are under orders." The "Live Free or Die" state became one of three in the nation this year to refuse the education money available under the law, underscoring some citizen's deepening distrust of the federal government.

Before long some parents were circulating rumors that Goals 2000 was connected to a United Nations cabal and were discussing how school inoculation programs could result in injections of mind-controlling substances, says one top state education official. [Sounds like some EDUCATION at last!]

Congress approved Goals 2000, but by the time legislation had been crafted that would appeal to enough lawmakers to pass, the voluntary program [Oh! Is this like that nice Internal Revenue SERVICE?!] had grown substantially. The model standards also became a source of frustration because they turned out to be so detailed.... The geography standards alone comprise 272 pages. [And they don't even TEACH geography any more, do they??!]

[William C. Boshier, Jr., head of Virginia's schools has things to say about federal intrusion into the education process:] His frustration is heightened by the number of federal requirements that apply to his department. "I'd like to tell you as superintendent of 35,000 children that I spend a lot of time dealing with children and curriculum. But instead, I spent an inordinate amount of time on friable asbestos, urea formaldehyde, underground fuel tanks, and lead in water fountains," he says.

MELTING MISSILES INTO GOLF CLUBS

From the August 20 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

Golf aficionados Cary Schuman and Jon Lisanti have given a new meaning to the phrase "drive for peace". They have launched a line of golf clubs made of melted-down nuclear missiles from the former Soviet Union. The driver, at $325, is called the Peace Missile. There also is a Peace Putter, at $109. The clubs began their lives as SS-23 midrange ballistic missiles. After those were banned under the 1987 Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces Treaty, Lisanti arranged for the outer portions of several to be imported to him.

The parts are melted down in two factories in the Reno, Nevada, and Los Angeles area, then mixed with stainless steel and refashioned into the clubs. There are certificates authenticating the origin. Pushing the symbolism further, Lisanti and Schuman hope to introduce a club made of both U.S. and Soviet missiles melted together. [Keep in mind, readers, that the "Cold War" Soviet-U.S. animosities have always been a ploy to further NWO aims.]

THE MIDEAST ACCORDING TO THE MAINSTREAM MEDIA

If you've been reading our Gulf War Syndrome interviews, (Part Three of which is found on the Front Page; see also Hatonn's writing from 1990, starting on page 2) you are well aware that Operation Desert Storm was NOT remotely as it was portrayed. And now, here we are again—on the verge of Desert Storm Part 2. You know that old saying, "Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me"!

We've been had so many times, it's downright humiliating! See if you can catch some of the more blatant lies in this article from the August 19 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

Despite strident denials from Iraq of any aggressive intent, the United States is rushing a brigade of 1,400 troops to Kuwait for military exercises as a warning to Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein [The word "dictator" and other nasty adjectives used by the press to describe Hussein simply means he is not yet in Israel's back pocket, don't you think?], the Pentagon said Friday. Announcement of the deployment came a day after the Pentagon said it had ordered ships with enough tanks and other combat material to equip more than 22,000 soldiers and Marines to steam toward the Persian Gulf. [I didn't think we had that many healthy troops left.]

The official Iraqi press was contemptuous of the U.S. moves. "The American administration creates unfounded stories to consolidate its presence in the [Persian] Gulf and terrorize the Sabahs," the ruling family of Kuwait, said the government-run Iraqi News Agency. [Can you refute that?!] Al-Thawra, Iraq's government party newspaper, described the Clinton Administration's fears of Iraqi military action as "merely a frog's croaking" and "a balloon full of lies." [How charmingly descriptive!]

Pentagon officials were caught by surprise by Hussein's lightning occupation of Kuwait in 1990 [That was an easy fib to catch!]....With the defection to Jordan last week of two of Hussein's sons-in-law [and there surely is more to THAT story than meets the press], concern has deepened among Pentagon officials that the Iraqi leader might lash out against Kuwait or some other target in hopes of rallying his forces and suppressing questions about his hold on power. [If you'd like some help reading between the lies, here is another version of the story:]

THE MIDEAST
ACCORDING TO SPOTLIGHT

This excerpted article is from the September 4 issue of THE SPOTLIGHT, [quoting:]

The recent defection of Iraqi Lt. Gen. Hussein Kamel al-Majid, noted as both a close aide and a son-in-law of President Saddam, has already cost "well over $100 million, and worse to come," says Mohsen Zamini, the respected Palestinian journalist who lives in Jordan.

When King Hussein of Jordan decided, under U.S. and Israeli pressure, to grant asylum to the renegade Iraqi general and his entourage, he expected "a worthy reward—and he got one," reports Zamini. The Iraqi defector also was "rewarded", according to the Jerusalem Post, for his cooperation.

"What the word 'cooperation' means is that Kamel and his brother, a presidential guard commander who also defected, are helping the CIA and the Mossad (Israel's secret service), to lure other Iraqi officers into turning against Saddam, who is being set up for the kill," explained a Jordanian diplomat at UN headquarters here.

iraqi lt. gen hussein kamel &
nayef p1006 p-33

To encourage the presumed Iraqi plotters with a display of elite U.S. special operations and commando forces in the region, the White House is moving some 22,000 troops from McDill Air Force Base, Camp Pendleton, Ft. Bragg and Ft. Hood into Jordan, Kuwait and other Persian Gulf beachheads. The official cover is that this ominous military presence represents merely U.S. participation in a series of regional training exercises. In reality, the troop movements are meant to set the stage for a coup against Saddam directed by the CIA and its longtime ally, the Mossad. The top priority hugely expensive covert project involving the assassination of Saddam and the forcible ouster of his regime is code named “Operation Jackhammer”. [Ouch! I don’t like the sound of that!]

[What’s behind the defection of Saddam’s two sons-in-law? This article reveals details on sales of oil on the European black market (due to the U.S.-sponsored international blockade):] Posing as wheeler-dealer petroleum brokers, a team of Israeli agents reportedly managed to entrap Iraq’s high-living armaments minister, Kamel, in a series of questionable transactions last winter. [They made him an offer he COULDN’T refuse.]

That Kamel is married to one of Saddam’s daughter’s—as is his brother, head of the presidential guard—meant that exposure of his self-dealing would bring on the sort of swift and terminal retribution the stern Iraqi ruler reserved for traitors.

According to UN observers, Israeli officials met clandestinely with Kamel in Italy and urged him to help “eliminate” Saddam with so-called “touch toxins”—a high-tech CIA poison spray that adheres invisibly to metallic or plastic surfaces, and kills on contact. But regional military sources say the CIA took over the handling of Kamel at this stage, and persuaded him to activate a military coup among the senior Iraqi commanders close to Saddam but, like Kamel, fearful of the consequences if their derelictions were exposed. [Blackmail is a dependable tool among the vermin of the underworld.]

[And what about the daughters? Are they mad at their dad and seeking his overthrow?:] According to one usually-reliable source, Saddam’s daughter Raya and Raghad, who are married to the two defecting brothers, were kidnapped, taken from Iraq under a pretext and without knowing the extent of the plot to defect. They are now being forcibly held in Jordan and not permitted to communicate with the outside world.

Kamel appeared before reporters on the lawn of [Jordanian] King Hussein’s palace to claim that Saddam was planning to invade both Saudi Arabia [so as to squeeze up to $50 million in funds for the operation from Saudi King Fahd] and Kuwait. “It’s clear that Mossad disinformation specialists are staging these defectors’ press conferences,” said a Jordanian diplomat in the UN Delegates’ Lounge. [Well, this article is more believable, wouldn’t you say?]

MANDATORY HOLOCAUST STUDIES IN NEW JERSEY

It’s been a while since we’ve run a holocaust article; it’s still very BIG news on a daily basis—pretty good press for a 50-year-old lie! From the September 4 issue of THE SPOTLIGHT, [quoting:]

Students returning to school in New Jersey this fall are in for a real treat. The New Jersey Holocaust Commission [the WHAT!?!??] has put together a 500-page curriculum showing school districts how to correctly [politically correctly] incorporate Holocaust education in their lesson plans. People will be thrilled to learn that not only World War II’s much-talked-about Holocaust will be discussed. Atrocities against Native Americans, Blacks during slavery and Cambodians will also get honorable mention.

Governor Christine Todd Whitman—who is touted as a 1996 GOP vice presidential candidate—recently signed into law the requirement that Holocaust studies be pursued in all public schools in the Garden State.

PARENTS CHEAT SO KIDS CAN WIN JUNIOR LIVESTOCK SHOWS

Most of this week's News Desk articles focus on government that lies, cheats, steals—and worse! Remember, we get what we ask for in life—including government. This article is a sad example of moral bankruptcy in the private sector in an arena that has always been a symbol of wholesome Americana. This article appeared in the August 21 issue of THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, [quoting:]

It was an all-American moment—grinning 16-year-old Ryan Rash resting his head on his grand champion steer Badger after winning the blue ribbon at the National Western Stock Show. The lumbering, black steer fetched $37,500 at auction, and Ryan and his parents couldn't be more proud. But within days, the ribbon had been stripped, the money forfeited, and Ryan banned for life from the Denver show. The reason? Cheating. Badger had been fed an illegal, steroid-like drug called clenbuterol that beefed him up, giving him the straight lines and muscular physique of a champion. Ryan's parents admitted responsibility.

They are not alone on the junior livestock show circuit. At shows across the country, the illegal growth promoter was detected last fall and spring in more than a dozen winning steers and lambs that had been paraded around arenas by America's fresh-faced youngsters. As state fairs prepare to open their gates, U.S. Food and Drug Administration officials are re-arming themselves with kits to detect the drug, which has proven fatal in Europe where people ate the tainted meat. [It may well turn up one of these days as an FDA-approved cancer cure!]

The drug may be the most appalling deception in the show arena, but it is not the only method of cheating. Over the years, exhibitors have been caught using cosmetic surgery to get rid of extra neck flab, injecting air under the animal's skin with a bicycle pump to give it smoother lines, and using twine, glue and wig hair to fill out an animal's bony legs. [Before I get too indignant, I have to reflect on humans'—especially females'—deceptive methods of improving their appearance!]

HOLY GRAIL, BATMAN!

Here is the idolatry offering of the week; it comes from the August 18 issue of THE BOSTON GLOBE, [quoting:]

ROME—The plot surrounding the age-old quest for the Holy Grail thickened yesterday when members of a mysterious religious order claimed the relic, used to collect the blood of Christ, was in their hands. The Order of the Knights Templar, who claim descent from the order founded in 1120 in Jerusalem by French crusaders, presented what it said was the Holy Grail during a news conference at its headquarters in an apartment in a rundown suburb of Rome. [Interesting staging.]

“We have decided it is time that the world knew about the grail’s true whereabouts,” said Rocco Zingaro di San Ferdinando, grand master of the Templars in Italy, holding up a minute green, mottled-glass flask. Zingaro was the second person in less than a week to claim possession of the Holy Grail, which according to Christian tradition [which certainly doesn’t equate with Truth] was used as the chalice by Jesus Christ at the Last Supper before his Crucifixion.

Last week, a British amateur historian, Graham Phillips, said an onyx goblet he found in the attic of a house in central England was the relic. At least three churches in Europe also claim to house the real grail, and numerous historical detectives throughout the ages have claimed to have discovered the relic.

“We have unveiled the true Holy Grail partly in response to last week’s false claim that the grail had been found in Britain and partly because as mankind approaches the year 2000 it is in need of the grail for its salvation,” Zingaro said. He said the true grail was given to the Templars 20 years ago by the late Italian academic Antonio Ambrosini, who belonged to the order. The relic has since been housed in the order’s headquarters. “Ambrosino traveled the world visiting both Africa and South America. He recovered the grail from a Coptic monastery in Egypt. He gave it to me as a wedding gift, saying it would eventually bring peace to the world,” Zingaro said. [End of quoting.]

Holy Blood, Holy Grail, by Michael Baigent, et al. and Guardians of the Grail by J.R. Church are a lot more fascinating than an old cup, as the Knights Templar are well aware. These books unravel the legend which proposes that Mary Magdalene bore sacred children—who in turn became the royalty of Europe—and the Super Elite, and that this BLOODLINE is supposedly the Holy Grail. Quite the story. But far from the truth.

GLORIFICATION OF STUPIDITY

“One trend that bothers me is the glorification of stupidity, that the media are reassuring people that it’s all right not to know anything. That to me is far more dangerous than a little pornography on the Internet...Teens should be surrounded by people who know deep things.”

Carl Sagan, (member of M-15)
from the 8/4/95 issue of THE MODESTO BEE

MARK OF THE BEAST

“Is the beast referred to [in Revelation 13:18] the uncontrollable power of the carbon 666 atom? When a carbon 666 atom (6 protons, 6 neutrons, 6 electrons) deviates from its process of nuclear evolution, the omnipotent power of the atom is so uncontrollable that in time it devours and grinds itself into an infinitesimal dust. Indeed, from dust thou came and into dust of carbon atoms thou shalt return. Man is made of carbon 666 atoms. He is always subjected to being consumed by the beast, meaning subject to death.”

From the July issue of ACRES U.S.A.
